Cumberland Mayor Takes Back Seat in Courtenay

Bypassed Town Claps Politely

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Staff Reporter

COURTENAY — She was 82 years old and the cancellation of the queen's visit to Cumberland, "was the dirtiest trick" that's ever been played on her.

"It's a downright shame," Mrs. Ellen Miller complained.

"I came to Cumberland 59 years ago, and at that time there wasn't even any Courtenay, but Cumberland was a bustling place, a roaring town," she said, looking out at the 500 or so Cumberland folk who had come to Courtenay's Woodcote Park Monday to catch a glimpse of the queen, Prince Philip and Princess Anne.

And a fleeting glimpse it was. It took the royal party exactly 45 seconds to drive past the Cumberland contingent. Sitting in an open car, the queen seemed unaware of the controversy that had been caused by the cancellation of her visit to Cumberland, about five miles west of Courtenay.

Cumberland Mayor Bill Moncrief said that he had been invited to meet the royal family at Comox, but that he did not go.

Asked why, he said he didn't "want to go into all that again."

He said he was "tired of all this nonsense. I had my reasons and they were good ones, and they have been plastered all over the papers. I don't want to say anything more that may spoil the queen's visit."

The park, which had been given to Cumberland residents as an assembly place for the big day, was virtually empty an hour before the queen's arrival.

There were a few Canadian Legion members, a few senior citizens, several dozen school children and the Mayor.

"I have the greatest admiration for the queen," said Moncrief before the royal party arrived.

"But I'm not going to be standing in the front line to welcome her. It still makes me mad to think that first she was all set to drive through Cumberland and then all of a sudden, the trip is called off."

The people of Cumberland, he said, were still all very upset about the decision to take the town out of the queen's itinerary because of what tour officials said was lack of time.

"Don't make me laugh. A very casual tour it was going to be. I wonder what's so casual about shaking the hands of all these tin gods the queen has to meet every day?" Moncrief said.

The mayor's mood was reflected in the Cumberland crowd's general attitude. They were going to greet the queen politely, maybe gladly, but not over-enthusiastically.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Miller continued telling people around her what she thought of the whole thing.

Paris Lowers Mart Barrier To U.K. Entry

BRUSSELS (AP) — France, which twice has blackballed British bids to join the European Economic Community, made at least one clear concession Monday in its new proposals on bringing Britain into the common market.

The French dropped a demand for a promise of drastic cuts in British sugar imports from Commonwealth countries, especially Jamaica, Guyana and Mauritius.

This was certain to disappoint French sugar beet growers, long a powerful group. But it won the general approval of other common market members and an expression of optimism from Geoffrey Rippon, the chief British negotiator.

The British negotiator told reporters at Brussels Airport the French offer was a sign that a way through the bargaining difficulties would begin to appear in the next few days.

Another new French proposal was disclosed. It dealt with the sum Britain should contribute to the EEC budget in its first years of membership.

Other market countries appear to favor the proposal. It lays down a formula including collections from British duties on farm and industrial products, and a sum calculated from the size of Britian's gross national product. There also would be a rebate, which is what the other members and Britian want most to know about.

On other issues there was less progress.

The French put forward a proposal on the future of the pound sterling, a subject the British have been trying to avoid.

The French want a promise that every year for 20 years the British would pay back five per cent of its debts, called sterling balances, a total of $10,320 million, owed to dozens of countries. Other member countries would be satisfied with a statement by the British that they want to reduce the sum.

Floating Mark Rides Out Dollar Storm

BONN (UPI)—Emergency currency action by west European nations appeared Monday to have eased the international monetary crisis. The U.S. dollar steadied during the day on some markets and the wholesale selling of dollars by speculators ended for the time being.

Devaluation in Austria dropped the dollar to its lowest point since the end of the Second World War and the "floating" of the West German mark had the effect of devaluating the dollar 3.75 per cent. But the dollar was firm in London, Paris and some other money centres.

Money speculators were reported holding back in West Germany, betting the mark would be worth more in the next few days.

In Washington, the U.S. treasury department said it felt the international financial crisis was improving and "no immediate action" was planned. International banker Ezra Zilkha in New York said the emergency period was over although the "basic questions" remain unsolved. And Nobel Prize-winning economist Paul A. Samuelson in Cambridge, Mass., said the measures would restore "equilibrium" to European markets and should not be considered "an economic Pearl Harbor."

In West Germany, the crisis centre, an expected immediate outflow of dollars failed to materialize on the first trading day since exchanges were closed Wednesday in Germany, Switzerland, Austria, the Netherlands and Belgium.

The problem began last week as traders and speculators flooded West German banks with dollars considered overvalued against the healthy and prosperous mark. By purchasing marks and holding them, the speculators could clear a profit when trading them back to receive more dollars than originally invested if the dollar slipped in value.

But throughout the capitals of Europe Monday, trading was cautious. Observers felt many speculators were hoping the mark would rise to as much as 5 per cent above the old parity of 3.66 to the dollar, or perhaps an official

Not All Sandspit Color Ceremonial

White Curse, Red Heap

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Staff Reporter

SANDSPIT — That wasn't the red carpet Queen Elizabeth saw Monday when she looked down the stairs from the official platform at this Queen Charlotte Islands airport and logging centre.

It was a fallen Haida Indian dancer in a crimson native robe — victim of one of the curses the white world inflicted on his people a long time ago.

He was drunk.

"Someone gave him the drink today," said his mother, a member of the colorful dancing group that — despite the one unrehearsed incident — thoroughly pleased the queen, Prince Philip and their daughter, Princess Anne.

The queen, in particular, spent much time chatting with the brightly-robed Indians afterward.

The wobbly dancer, who had spun away from the rest of the group prior to the arrival of the royal visitors, had a hard time keeping his headgear from slipping down over his eyes.

Suddenly he tumbled to the ground at one side of the stairs and lay there in a heap, the first object the queen saw when she looked down the platform. She smiled briefly.

When he tried to give a repeat performance a little later, a smiling RCMP officer took him gently to the edge of the grass clearing where the dance was taking place — the tribesman attempting to turn the officer into a dancing partner as they went.

Proud, Sad

It all seemed to fit into place with what Chief Willy Matthews had been saying a little earlier.

The 85-year-old chief of the Haida Eagle tribe is a proud man who is glad to greet his queen and who has deep respect for the flag, but he is not happy with what the white world has done to his people.

"Personally I don't believe in this junk," he said of the plastic that had been affixed to his wooden headress in place of the whale's teeth that were once used.

"I don't think it has been good for us," he said — "this civilized life your people brought. We're modern now. We smoke cigarettes and swear in English."

There was a touch of sadness in the old man's tones. He could just as easily had said white man taught the Haida to drink alcohol and that one day one of his men would fall down before the queen.

Fire Sweeps London Hotel Killing Seven, Injuring Nine

LONDON (CP) — Fire swept through a five-storey London hotel early today and firemen reported seven persons were killed.

One woman leaped from a window and was impaled on railings below, a policeman reported.

"It was terrible," he said. "She was taken away alive, I think. People were screaming and shouting from windows all over the hotel."

Firemen scrambled up ladders in search of other guests possibly trapped by heavy flames and smoke.

Scotland Yard said nine persons were injured. The Yard reported earlier that 40 persons had been taken to hospitals, but a spokesman said later that was an exaggeration caused by confusion at the scene.

The Hills is one of several hotels in the area that attracts tourists seeking comfortable accommodations at rates lower than the top London hotels.

Several hundred people, many in their night clothes, watched the drama, their faces grim. Relays of ambulances skirted the crowds taking casualties to hospital.

The hotel is undergoing extensive renovations and only about 30 persons were in the

SEOUL (AP) — A bus jammed with at least 90 persons missed a curve and plunged down a 50-foot cliff into a reservoir Monday, killing at least 76 persons.

It was South Korea's worst bus accident.

Police said 14 persons had been rescued and 76 bodies recovered after the smashed bus was brought up from the waters of Chongpyong reservoir, 20 miles east of Seoul.

Etna Grows Dangerous

CATANIA, Sicily (AP) — Mount Etna's worst eruption in two decades became dangerous Monday as lava spouted from new vents almost half way down the mountain and streamed toward the towns of Milo and Fornazzo.

The new outbreak Sunday night was at the 5,905-foot level of the 10,826-foot volcano. By dawn the streams of molten rock had reached the 3,608-foot level.

B.C. Not for Sale — Bennett

Province-First Policy Set for Parley

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislature Reporter

Premier Bennett said Monday he plans to present "a British Columbia first" policy to the federal-provincial constitutional talks which are to be held here in mid-June.

The premier added he also wished to serve notice on Ottawa that "British Columbia is not for sale."

Referring to an Ottawa report, published last weekend in the Victoria Times, which indicated that the provincial government might be willing to negotiate the sale of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway to the federal government, Bennett said he wanted to remove all doubt from the minds of the public and federal authorities.

"Bennett and British Columbia will not sell the PGE. British Columbia is not for sale and the PGE is part of the great public ownership of this province," he said.

Bennett added: "British Columbia is going to be more forceful in seeing it gets a fair share in Confederation which it isn't getting now. We will be forceful — we will be good hosts, but we will present British Columbia's point of view.

"I am just advising Ottawa and the prime minister as he moves into Russia that we intend to keep control over our own development."

The premier said it would be more logical if Ottawa took up his repeated offers over the years to sell the Canadian National line from Prince George to Prince Rupert to B.C. for a nominal amount so that it could become part of the PGE.

"Ottawa never has any confidence and faith in the north," he said. "Only the PGE opened up our great northern areas for the benefit of the people of the province. Do you think that we would sell this dynamic railroad to a government 3,000 miles away that has no interest in the north?

"Of course not."

revaluation would be approved by the government.

To combat this and encourage an outflow of dollars, the German government decreed that dollar accounts can draw interest only with the approval of the central bank. Certain stocks and bonds also can be purchased only with approval of the central bank.

The key to the solution was handed West Germany after a weekend meeting of European common market in Brussels. The market gave permission for its six member nations to allow their currencies to float free — if desired — of the dollar for a time to bridge the problem.

A summary of the dollar's current status in Europe, in addition to West Germany:

Switzerland — The franc was revalued up 7.07 per cent from the earlier parity of 4.37 to 4.08 by the government, the first major change in the currency in 35 years. However, trading in Zurich settled Monday at 4.10 to 4.11 francs, shading the official rate in favor of the dollar.

Austria — The government revalued the schilling by about 5 per cent, from the old parity figure of about 26 for a dollar to a new rate of 24.75. Dollars were traded in unlimited numbers Monday at the new rate, lowest since the Second World War.

Holland — The guilder was set free to float on supply and demand from the former rate of 3.5925 for a dollar. In some early dealings Monday, the dollar dropped as much as 4 per cent below parity (3.44 guilders) but rebounded on the Amsterdam exchange in the afternoon to wind up at 3.53-3.54, around 1.5 per cent under the official parity.

Belgium — The franc operates under a two-tier exchange system: An official market and a free market. The central bank supports the dollar on both normally. But government sources said the bank would not support the dollar on the free market when it reopens Tuesday, in effect allowing the Belgian franc to float. Unofficial trading Monday had dollars accepted at a rate of 48 or 49 francs — two to four per cent below the official parity. The cabinet was to meet to decide whether to officially float the currency.

In Paris and London, the dollar remained stable, backed by the governments. Japanese officials reaffirmed their intention to maintain the current parity of the yen.

Trading also resumed on the exchanges in Portugal, Spain, Scandinavia and Greece.

Bypassed Town

"You know, I think if the queen had known how we feel about this, she would have come to Cumberland, but she has all kinds of people who make decisions without even bothering to inform her," she said.

"What's Courtenay anyway? In Cumberland, we've been celebrating Empire Day for 87 years."

Across the street, a small boy seemed to be getting a little impatient.

"When is the queen going to be here?" he asked loudly, and then proceeded to blow a great big bubble with the gum he had been furiously chewing for quite some time.

"Don't do that, especially when the queen drives by," said the woman next to him, obviously his mother.

Another boy was wondering if the queen really looked as nice as on television.

"I'm going to watch her closely and see if she smiles. She always smiles on TV," said Steven Peterson, 10, of Cumberland.

The boy across the street was just blowing another bubble. The mayor of Cumberland had disappeared behind his constituents when the first official car came cruising around the corner.

The third car in the 20-car procession was occupied by the queen and Prince Philip, followed by Princess Anne, also in a convertible.

There was polite and happy applause, but cheers were not numerous. The queen and Philip waved at the Cumberland crowd and 45 seconds later, it was all over.

Mayor Moncrief offered this comment: "I hope we showed them we're alive and exist. It's too bad the queen didn't come to Cumberland. We would have gone all out to make it a memorable event."

Wife-Beating Too Noisy

TORONTO (CP) — They had noise problems back in 16th-century England, says Dr. M. Hayley of the Toronto Workmen's Compensation Board. Queen Elizabeth I issued a decree banning wife-beating after 10 p.m. "so that neighbors wouldn't be disturbed by cries," she said.

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

A Nose Is a Nose...

By G. C. THOSTESON, M.D.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you please discuss some of the things involved in having your nose straightened? Is it very expensive? — Mrs. A.M.B.

It's called rhinoplasty — plastic surgery on the nose. Your question is a pretty broad one. When you say you want your nose straightened, is it because of breathing difficulties? To repair the results of an injury? Or because you don't like the shape of your nose?

In the first two cases, health insurance can cover the cost — if it's purely a matter of appearance, then ordinarily insurance will not apply and you'll usually have to pay the cost yourself.

Cost will vary according to what has to be done, but to get the best results there has to be preparation in advance — photographs or sketches to indicate how the face will look after the nose has been altered.

The operation itself has to be done in the hospital, and a certain amount of aftercare is necessary, so all that, plus a fairly short time in the hospital, means a cost of some hundreds of dollars. If you are seriously contemplating such work, discuss it with a plastic surgeon, and he can give you a pretty good estimate of cost, plus an estimate of how long you will be off work.

One question that is often asked is how to find a good plastic surgeon. The answer is simple: Ask your regular physician to refer you to one.

There really is a good deal of nose-bobbing and other surgery for the sake of appearance, but one thing that distresses plastic surgeons is to encounter the patient who expects too much — that just getting a different-shaped nose will transform a plain Jane into Zsa Zsa what's-her-name.

If you are realistic about what you want done, fine. But don't get any wild daydreams about a new nose changing the rest of your face.

74-bedroom hotel when the fire broke out, according to a spokesman.

Guests at the adjacent 85-room Langham Hotel were evacuated from their rooms shortly after the fire started at about midnight Monday night. They came from many countries.

As they sat in the lobby, in dressing gowns or clothes hastily pulled over night attire, they talked to reporters about the blaze.

"I heard men and women screaming but I could not see them for the smoke," said Jack Mitchell of Pennsylvania.

"Then the firemen got a light on and I saw a man in a red jacket and a girl sitting on a window ledge. Firemen got a ladder to the girl and brought her down and then went back for the man.

"Later I saw them carrying the limp body of another woman down the ladder."

Twenty fire engines and 100 firemen battled the inferno. Police cleared the area when they feared the entire front of the 74-room hotel would collapse.

The Hills Hotel recently was taken over by the management of the Langham and also was used as a staff quarters.

Happy New Year— His Pay Is His Own

NEW YORK (AP) — Monday was "tax freedom day" in the United States.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce says May 10 was the first day in 1971 that the average U.S. taxpayer is working for himself rather than the government.

Until Monday, the chamber says, every cent the average U.S. taxpayer earned was needed to pay federal, state and local taxes of all types this year.

Last year, the chamber figured that May 9 was "tax freedom day."

The chamber calculated that the average U.S. taxpayer now works two hours and 51 minutes of every eight-hour day just to pay his tax bills.

These conclusions were based on estimates of total taxes paid in the United States, both directly and indirectly, and estimates of total personal income for 1971.

Showing at 3,800 Feet

Imperial Taps Oil In Mackenzie Delta

TORONTO (CP) — Imperial Oil Ltd. reported Monday a showing of oil and gas during a drill stem test at a well six miles east of Tuktoyaktuk in the Northwest Territories.

The company said the showing occurred at a depth of 3,800 feet and further drilling and testing will be required to evaluate the field.

The new well, called Mayogiak, is 30 miles southwest of a discovery reported by Imperial at Atkinson Point in January, 1970. The discovery well tapped oil at a depth of 5,700 feet.

The Atkinson Point well, the new discovery and a number of other wells all have been drilled on a 10-million-acre block held by Imperial in the Mackenzie Delta.

They looked for five hours, until they picked up 240,000 nickels—$12,000 worth—which spilled from a truck en route from the U.S. mint in Denver, Colo., to banks in the Lancaster area.

Chambers 'Last Frontier'

BURNABY (CP) — The president of Pacific Western Airlines predicted Monday that a new national political party will have to be founded to "ward off attacks" on free enterprise in Canada.

Speaking at a chamber of commerce luncheon, Don Watson said that groups such as the chambers of commerce and boards of trades would be a future bulwark of such a party or pressure group.

"The chambers of commerce are perhaps the strongest weapon in the arsenal for the defence of free enterprise in Canada," he said.

"They are the last frontier with any capability to stand up 19 feet tall against the galloping monster of socialism."

Watson said increased social welfare benefits, "serious talk" of guaranteed income, and an increase in the number of marketing boards all are recent developments in Canada's socialization.

"It's time we get some of our hitchhikers off the highways and get them into the resource areas in our north so that we can get more in balance with Japan.

"If we don't get off our butts, the hitchhikers will be taking over our cars and occasionally offering us rides."

Watson said Canada's economic drift to the left is partially a result of hundreds of millions of dollars of "iron curtain money" being used to "change the wholesome minds of our kids."

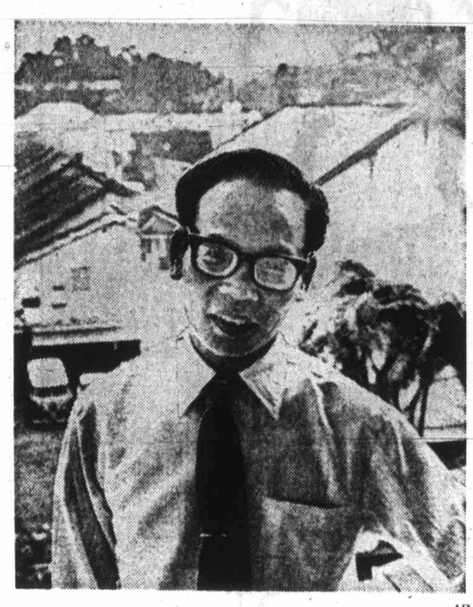

"There are too many university hangers-on — for eight to 15 years — with no visible means of support. At least it wasn't visible until this phenomenon was discovered about eight months ago."

Traveller's Cheques Best Bet

Mark Not for Tourist

Greater Victoria travellers heading for Europe who want to take advantage of the floating mark are sunk before they start.

"It's impossible to buy traveller's cheques in any currency here in Victoria except in Canadian or U.S. dollars or in British sterling," George Maycock, manager of the Government Street branch of the Bank of Montreal, said Monday.

Maycock explained it is possible to buy small amounts of most European currencies, but not in the form of traveller's cheques.

However, most banks and travel agents don't recommend carrying large amounts of cash in any currency.

Maycock advises his clients to buy traveller's cheques in U.S. dollars or sterling. "The advantage is," he said, "that it is possible to get a good rate of exchange even in small centres, while it might be almost impossible to get a quotation on the Canadian dollar."

Just what a traveller should do depends to a large extent on where he is going.

Those stopping off or transferring at Toronto or Montreal could buy cheques in foreign currency at airport exchanges, but this involves the danger of carrying a large amount of cash to make the deal.

Airports in the major centres in Canada have exchanges where foreign currency notes can be bought.

The traveller is advised to pick up just enough cash in the currency of the country he intends to visit to get him from the airport to his hotel. cash traveller's cheques readily, but they don't usually offer as good a rate of exchange as do banks. This difference is to some extent offset by the fact that banks make a charge for handling the cheques. This applies where the cheque is not in the currency of the country the traveller is visiting.

For example, a Canadian pays a premium to buy U.S. dollar cheques. He also pays a fee to get the cheques. When he takes his U.S. dollar cheque to the bank, say in Vienna, he is again charged a fee to convert his U.S. dollar cheque into schillings.

In Britian last fall, large stores would cash dollar cheques without cost for customers. A British store manager explained last December in London, "Why not? It's worth the 2 per cent to get the business."

Despite the cost and the unsettled international money market, a traveller's cheque in dollar or sterling currency is still the best buy for local tourists. Most travellers don't spend enough to make wheeling and dealing in currency profitable or practical.

Travellers who want to risk carrying large amounts of cash can get all they want if they advise their bank in advance. Maycock said his bank could get as many German marks as a tourist wished, but would take a little time.

City travel agent C. E. Blaney said Monday he had been getting calls from travellers wanting advice. He agrees with Maycock that traveller's cheques are the best bet. Unlike currency, if a cheque is lost or stolen the traveller can still get his money from the issuing company.

With no cheques in German marks available here, the tourist will have to settle for dollars or sterling. For the sake of convenience, his best bet is U.S. dollars or sterling.

Dollars may fluctuate and the pound is pegged to the U.S. dollar, so there is little room for speculation.

White Strategists Help Hanoi Forces

By HOLGER JENSEN

SAIGON (AP) — Soviet, Chinese, Cuban, North Korean and French "military strategists" are advising Communist-led forces fighting in South Vietnam, a high-ranking defector from Hanoi claimed today.

He said the Frenchmen were former prisoners of war from the French Indochina conflict who were not repatriated under the 1954 Geneva accords.

The defector is Dr. Dang Tan, a former official in North Vietnam's defence ministry sent to South Vietnam as "minister of public health" in a proposed revolutionary government.

He said he personally saw foreign Communist advisers at rest stations on the Ho Chi Minh Trail when he travelled south through Laos in 1967.

In the next two years, while he was establishing a guerrilla hospital in South Vietnam's Pleiku province, Tan said, he saw "four or five groups of foreign military strategists, each numbering three to five men."

They always carried arms, usually wore black pyjamas and were invariably accompanied by "large security forces" of North Vietnamese soldiers, he said.

Tan, 42, spoke to The Associated Press through an interpreter in his first interview since his defection Sept. 26, 1969. He later appeared at a news conference, but it was not explained why he had been kept under wraps by Saigon's chieu hoi (open arms) ministry for more than 1½ years.

Tan's disclosures could help to explain recurring reports of Caucasians seen fighting with Viet Cong and North Vietnamese units. These never have been proved conclusively because United States and South Vietnamese forces have never found any Caucasian bodies among Communist dead.

Asked whether some of the foreign advisers might have been U.S. prisoners of war, Tan replied: "No. Hanoi propaganda says American GIs are fighting with the VC-NVA (Viet Cong-North Vietnamese army), but I have never seen this with my own eyes.

"The men I saw were Russians, Chinese, Cubans, North Koreans and French. They came south to study the battlefields, to study the situation and see how they could help. I have seen them deep in South Vietnamese territory. I have heard them speaking their foreign languages."

Ice Isle Ruling Manslaughter

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — A federal jury has found Mario J. Escamilla guilty of involuntary manslaughter in the shooting death of Bennie Lightsy on a floating Arctic ice island last July.

Escamilla, 32, could be sentenced to up to three years in prison.

Lightsy, 42, was a civilian employed by the United States environmental science services administration and was in charge of a 19-man weather-research team operating on the ice pack, T-3, about 325 miles south of the North Pole. The research was being carried out under a U.S. Navy contract.

Escamilla was a member of the team.

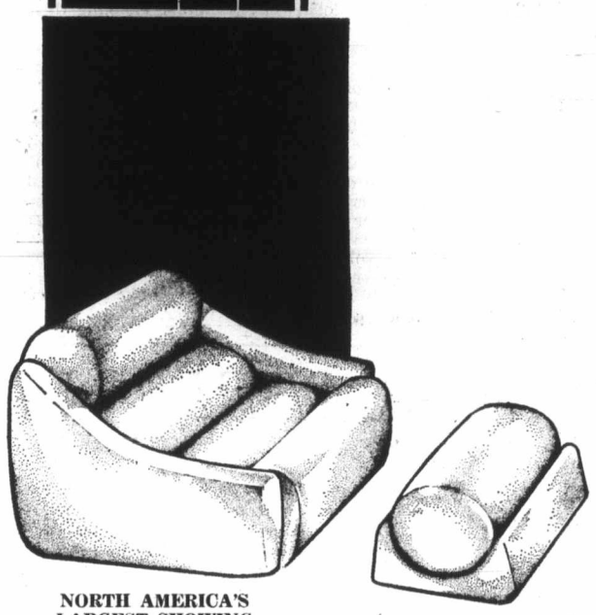

Judge Oren Lewis of the U.S. District Court has said the case should be appealed to a higher court because of doubt whether the U.S. has jurisdiction over the ice island.

The jury reached a verdict after 5½ hours of deliberation Friday night, but Judge Lewis had left the court and the verdict was sealed and not announced until Monday.

Escamilla testified that he had been holding the rifle that killed Lightsy July 16. He said he did not even touch the trigger of the gun which, he said, was defective and went off accidentally.

The two men, testimony said, were arguing over 15 gallons of home-made raisin

Second Try for Mars Has Till Month-End

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) — The new administrator of the space agency said Monday the launch of a second Mariner spacecraft toward Mars could be delayed until the end of May if necessary to make sure it would work.

Engineers aimed toward a May 18 launch, but Dr. James Fletcher said that date was "uncertain" pending the results of an intensive investigation now underway into Saturday's launch failure of the first attempt to orbit Mars.

"I think we want to be sure that the second launch is going to be all right, or at least that we've done everything we can do to be sure it is all right before it goes," Fletcher said at a news conference in Washington. He said he personally will participate in the probe of the $77 million failure.

"Although May 18 is the designated date, we do have until the end of the month, approximately, and if necessary we will delay that long," he said in reply to questions.

The absolute launch deadline is June 16, but a flight later than June 6 would lessen changes of success in the one remaining attempt.

B.C. Ad Ban Protested

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

Through the Suez to Peace

IT WILL BE FOUR YEARS on the sixth day of next month that the Suez Canal has been closed, and, despite the prominence it is being given in Middle East peace negotiating, its importance from an economic point of view is far from what it used to be.

A lot has happened in four years and it is doubtful that there will be any great queuing of ships if and when the waterway becomes operative again.

During 1966, the last full year it was used, the canal carried ships with 247 million tons of goods. Less than one-third of the tonnage was in dry cargo, and the remainder was oil, with nearly all of it going to northern Europe.

Since then, oil has been obtained from Libya, Venezuela and the United States, or else taken from the Middle East on the long haul around the South African cape. Granted, the extra miles of shipping pushed up costs, and it might be presumed that Europe would benefit from resumption of canal operation.

But, as has been stated, conditions change. At the time of its closure, the canal was having difficulty accommodating the larger tankers that were being built. It could not handle anything in excess of 80,000 tons. Since then, oil carriers have grown to 300,000 tons displacement.

The canal's future usefulness is challenged, also, by four pipelines now flowing the precious fluid. Israel operates one, and its Arab neighbors three others with a combined capacity of 80 million tons a year. This is almost half the amount borne by tankers through Suez in 1966.

And more pipelines are being built and planned for increased capacity in coming years.

They will have a major effect on the importance of the economics of the canal operations, along with costs involved in making it ship-shape. It would be reasonable to expect that shipping will have to bear a large portion of huge amounts it will take to clear the 109-mile-long channel of sunken ships and serious siltation. To widen it for modern-day supertankers would be even more expensive.

It might be asked, then, why is the canal being made a centrepiece in peace talks? United States Secretary of State, William Rogers, has been delving into the possibilities of its reopening in his two weeks of searching in the Middle East for areas of agreement in the Arab-Israeli conflict.

It would be of no great advantage to American merchant shipping which, during the last year of the canal's operation, was seventh among nations of the world in useage.

The answer, apparently, is in politics rather than in economics. Raymond H. Anderson wrote in a recent New York Times dispatch from Cairo: "Psychologically, a reopening would be a stimulus to the Egyptian people."

In other words, a canal settlement would bring a degree of stability to the Middle East from which a deeper peace might grow.

Sewage from Ferries

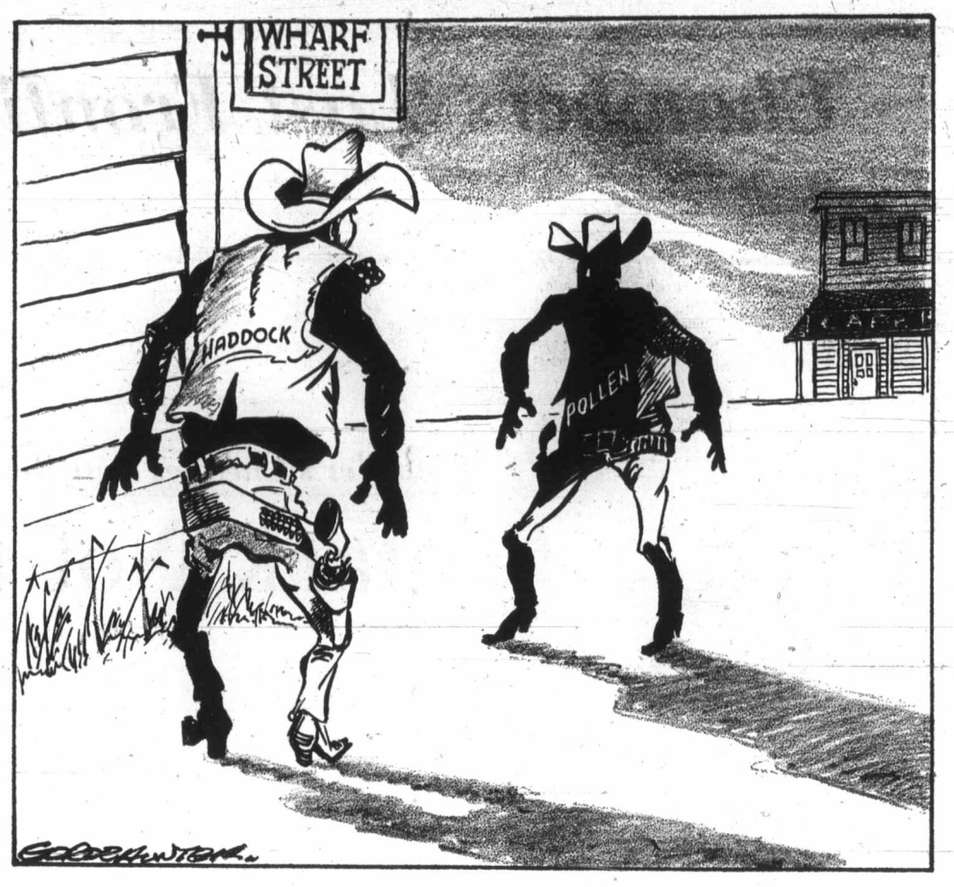

THE NANAIMO AND DISTRICT Fish and Game Protective Association has good reason to complain about the B.C. Ferries discharging raw sewage into Departure Bay when residents of Nanaimo are being called on to clean up the waterfront through spending millions of dollars on sewage collection and treatment. It is regrettable only that the vehement complaint has come too late, presumably, for quick action.

Mayor Frank Ney of Nanaimo, who wrote to Highways Minister Wesley Black and ferries manager Monty Aldous reinforcing the association's protest, recalls that he has twice raised the ferry sewage release problem in the legislature. Mr. Black, for his part, says that the question of installing sewage holding tanks on ferries on the Nanaimo-Vancouver run has been under review for some time — that "we don't want to contribute to the problem, we want to be part of the solution."

In the government service, however, it is all too plain that reviews can go on nearly forever. In this case, the fish and game association's understanding has been that installation of holding tanks is not planned until the ferries on the run out of Departure Bay are "stretched" to accommodate more cars and passengers. The stretched ferries in the Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen service have such tanks, enabling them not to discharge sewage in the harbors.

While the Nanaimo protest carries the sort of punch that ought to stir the highways department to action, it comes just as the tourist season is about to begin in earnest. Undoubtedly, there would be serious complaints too if ferries were now taken out of service to go to drydock and have small holding tanks installed, with the rearrangement of plumbing that this might entail.

But the department can already be faulted for not having completed its technical review sooner, and surely Mr. Black could give a commitment now that the work will be expedited as soon as the summer rush is over. Waiting for stretched ferries could make a mockery of the minister's promising words.

Washington Calling

SALT Talks Seem to Get Nowhere

By MARQUIS CHILDS from Vienna

IT strains belief that in this lighthearted capital, where opera and cream-filled pastries take precedence, a little group of men is charged with the destiny of every human being on the planet. That is the burden of the American - Soviet negotiators in the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) which in the fall will round out two years of secret exchanges.

Members of the U.S. Congress recently in Vienna were given a rare insight into the incredibly difficult and complex negotiation aimed at finding a way out of the nuclear jungle. Their report as they left here gave little hope for an early resolution of the profound differences separating the two sides.

In proposing an agreement limited to defensive missiles and omitting offensive missiles, Soviet chief delegate Vladimir Semyonov was saying, in effect, this: We will both promise to give up what you are building, the anti-ballistic missile, and we are not building, but the agreement will not cover what we are building.

With its continuing production of the giant SS-9 missiles, the Soviet Union now exceeds the United States in land-based intercontinental ballistic missiles by 40 per cent, members of Congress were told.

An agreement limited to ABMs could hardly last 12 months, granted it could be ratified by the Senate, before the growth of Soviet striking power would show its futility. Besides the 40 per cent superiority in land-based missiles, the magnitude of the Soviet submarine production is seen in the fact that one Soviet construction centre can outproduce those of the entire United States. This means that the Soviet Union will soon overtake the American underwater lead in Poseidon and Polaris.

While President Nixon has said that any agreement must link offensive and defensive missiles, the Soviet negotiators continue to say nyet. This is the deadlock that shows no signs of cracking as the fourth round of the SALT talks nears an end, expected toward the last of May.

As they sit in their carefully guarded conference room the negotiators are not immune from the echoes of the controversy over missile strength. From Washington, leaks by the Pentagon, or perhaps from Soviet sources, purport to give details of what is put on the conference table.

These leaks are acutely embarrassing to the American delegation, since they draw the Soviet accusation that the pledge of secrecy has been violated.

The latest report was of a Soviet proposal to limit anti-ballistic missiles to an agreed number, up to 100 each, around Moscow and Washington. This was an elaboration of the last December's proposal to confine ABMs to the two capitals. While there were some inaccuracies in the printed report — the agreement was to be reviewed every five years rather than to terminate at the end of that time — it was accurate enough to add to the embarrassment growing out of past leaks.

Another kind of offstage noise comes from Secretary of Defence Melvin R. Laird trumpeting dire warnings of new Russian silos in preparation to receive more giant SS-9s or perhaps even a newly developed super-giant missile. As they told visiting congressmen, the U.S. delegates do not discount these reports even though, as cynics note, they coincide with the pressure to put over defence appropriations.

Specialists attached to the American delegation have studied the same Samos satellite photos showing the silo construction. The number is said to be 40. They offer convincing proof of the Laird charge. The belief is that the Russians are building not for a first strike but for a counterforce capability — the capacity to respond to any attack, with a nuclear blow totally devastating the United States.

As the talks go on, new weapons systems are being deployed — the multiple warhead by the United States and presumably also by the Soviets. There is a tacit agreement at SALT that at this stage MIRV, the multiple independently targeted re-entry vehicle, will not come into the discussion. It cannot in any event be detected from the air.

In light of all this, the luxury of despair would be an easy recourse. Yet the chief American delegate, Gerard C. Smith, continues to work long and exacting hours, having a friendly relationship with Semyonov, spurred by the fact that Smith has learned passable Russian. He has an able young staff of political and scientific specialists. That there must come a breakthrough is a matter of faith rather than hope, and it may rest on Smith's own deep religious faith. The alternative, a nuclear arms race on the scale now visible, can only end in disaster.

Medical Coverage

THE story of the Procrustean bed has its modern counterpart in the B.C. political fables.

By order - in - council, all physiotherapy must now be of exact length, namely, five treatments. Coverage for ten treatments was cut to five treatments last July. Thus, if a patient needs any more treatments than five, his legs or arms, as the case may be, are rudely cut off to fit the brand new Procrustean bed designed by the cabinet — unless he can afford to continue the necessary therapy at his own expense in a private clinic. Alternatively, if he cannot afford to pay for the necessary therapy himself, he can go back very expensively to a hospital if one can be found with room for him.

Next, perhaps, the cabinet will decree a three - day treatment for pneumonia, four days for a coronary and seven days for a broken back. God help those whose illness does not fit their modern, provincial, Procrustean bed.

It is false economy to cut off effective medical physiotherapy as provided very economically in well run private clinics and send patients back to expensive hospitals to secure these treatments, or alternatively condemn them to a complete lack of mobility of useful production for the community.

As physiotherapy treatments are prescribed by doctors, there seems little reason the coverage will be abused. And who would want to continue the bother of visits after the necessity ceased? It is possible the government is applying political standards of conduct to the medical profession, but the medical profession didn't promise hospitals for sales tax and medical treatment for a set fee. The government is breaking its contract again with the people.

U.S. Control

The article by Richard Jackson, "Mr. Stafford and the Nationalists," was very one-sided and misleading. Mr. Stafford's views are unfortunately shared by many people, but this is the reason that the Committee for an Independent Canada was established. The argument is that American investment is good because it creates jobs for Canadians. The problem is that this investment is in the form of controlling the company that they invest their money in. Instead of portfolio capital (i.e. bonds and non-voting shares) most American capital is invested in voting shares. This had led to many Canadian firms being taken over by large American corporations.

Are we that dependent on imported American capital? The answer is no. Over 85 per cent of American direct investment in Canada from 1957 to 1965 was re-invested profits and loans from Canadian financial institutions. These figures are from the U.S. Department of Commerce. Thus only 15 per cent of the American direct investment is from outside Canada. Canada is being economically sold out with our own money!

There are two problems which may (have?) develop because of this domination of our economy by giant U.S. corporations. The first is that more and more of the profits will be sent to the U.S. This will increase the annual deficit in our national current accounts, and decrease our foreign exchange reserves. The second, and most costly result could be the influence that these giant American corporations have over our national and provincial governments. The argument for a better tax deal or no controls over foreign investment could be — you guessed it — without us, no jobs.

This could lead to grave consequences for our federal system. Remember what happened to John Diefenbaker, you know, the one who didn't want the atomic bombs from the United States.

Road to Ruin?

On what sort of "road-to-ruin" is the present Liberal government leading this country in its mishandling of the two prime problems now facing it — inflation and unemployment?

Just when most segments of labor and management are finally curbing their wage and price increases, along comes the Trudeau government with a mammoth wage increase for MPs (however much it may be justified) and thereby destroys all the anti-inflation efforts of the past two years.

And employment. One of the prime reasons behind this serious problem is the uncertainty created over the past two years by the apparently ill-considered White Paper on Taxation. And now the introduction of the proposed new overall tax scheme has been repeatedly promised and then postponed again and again — action that can only serve to heighten the original White Paper uncertainty.

"Charisma" may have won an election in 1968, but it does not and has not solved economic problems in 1970 and 1971.

Calley Case

If all be judged in peace and war,
How can we ask for judgment more;
Than that which falls upon ourselves
And not upon our gnomes and elves!

For gnomes and elves show up it seems
Beyond our hopes, our faiths, our dreams;
Our justice touches not their ways,
So unlike ours these trying days.

"Thou shalt not kill," is for ourselves
And not for all our gnomes and elves;
The Calley Case from up above,
Equates us all, if God is love!

Domestic Trauma

The U.S. Image Abroad

By ANTHONY LEJEUNE from London

THE picture of the United States which is currently being presented to the outside world through the media of television and the press has itself become (even apart from the reality behind it) an important and alarming factor.

Television viewers everywhere have seen thousands of young Americans, most of them long-haired and unkempt, swarming into the nation's capital in an attempt to make the United States government abandon the Vietnam war immediately, regardless of the consequences.

At the same time, the news bulletins have featured a string of ex-servicemen describing the atrocities committed by American forces in Vietnam: and there have been shocking stories of drug addiction, mutiny and the murder of officers.

An American lawyer, visiting Britain to promote a campaign in support of Angela Davis and the Soledad brothers, was sympathetically interviewed on television, and the London correspondent of The New York Times, when asked to comment, said it was probably quite true that Blacks could not receive a fair trial in the United States.

Soon afterwards, Shirley Maclaine appeared on British television and said that the Masai (who, although she didn't mention the fact, are traditionally one of the most warlike tribes in Africa) were more civilized and enlightened than bourgeois Americans.

A modish best-seller, The Greening of America, which claims that all America is being converted to the hippy philosophy, has been respectfully serialized in the London Times. And a journal called Peace (standing for "People Emerging against Corrupt Establishments") is being published by American servicemen in Britain — with financial help from, among others, Vanessa Redgrave. The current issue shows a picture of the Stars and Stripes in flames and reprints an appeal by Eldridge Cleaver for Negro soldiers in Vietnam to "start killing the racist pigs who are over there with you giving you orders."

How representative of their generation the protestors and demonstrators really are, and whether this panorama of incipient anarchy is a fair reflection of the United States now, people outside America have no means of knowing. Only the too-obvious satisfaction of some commentators and some American liberals in discussing these developments might lead a sceptical observer to suspect exaggeration or at least over-emphasis.

Meanwhile, the effect both on the friends of the United States and on her enemies must be considerable.

To her enemies the spectacle of the U.S. tearing herself to pieces can only give immense satisfaction. To her friends and allies it is profoundly alarming. The security of the western world still depends very largely on the military shield provided by America. If it becomes politically impossible for any American government to fulfil its international obligations (which is what the Vietnam protestors are trying to achieve), then U.S. allies and dependents will have to rethink their position very urgently.

Such a re-thinking would have consequences all around the globe — and not necessarily of a sort which American liberals would welcome. If the United States can no longer be relied on as an ally, vulnerable nations, from Israel to Formosa, from West Germany to Japan, will have to look to their own defences. Some might do it by trying to appease the communists, others by rearmament and nervous preparations for a possible pre-emptive strike. The result certainly, would be much greater instability.

Americans, however torn by domestic trauma, simply cannot afford to ignore the effect on the outside world of their present unique orgy of self-denigration.

Narrow Motives Dictate Attitudes of West Germany, France, Britain and United States

Politics Behind Current Monetary Crisis

BACKGROUND

By JOSEPH KRAFT, from Washington

The current monetary crisis is chiefly interesting as a marvelously sensitive indicator of political relations among the supposedly allied countries of the West. It shows that the Europeans are beset by a paralyzing variety of contradictory impulses.

The administration in Washington, once again obsessed with Vietnam and the problem of public confidence, is seen to be out to lunch when other issues arise. Some of the glow may even be coming off the man who has hitherto been the local golden boy, Secretary of the Treasury John Connally.

The country most on the spot, of course, has been West Germany.

The obvious, sensible action for the Bonn regime would have been a quick upward revaluation of the mark.

That would have sent dollars flowing back to the United States and made it easier to deal with West Germany's internal inflation problem. It also would have shown Chancellor Willy Brandt leading the way toward cohesion in the West.

But Chancellor Brandt has hooked himself on the eastern policy of detente with Russia. To sustain that policy he has depended on the coalition support of a splinter party, the Free Democrats. The Free Democrats count as their main base of support the German farmers.

Revaluation, unless coordinated with currency adjustment by Germany's partners in the European Common Market, would have exposed German farmers to revised pricing arrangements in the Common Market.

So rather than run the risk of a strain in the coalition, the Brandt government diddled until it could at least throw some of the blame on other European governments.

For the French government of President Georges Pompidou the money crisis raised to the surface the shadow that has dominated the Paris regime since its earliest days. That is the shadow of Gen. de Gaulle.

The regime is forced to live with the general by a Gaullist majority which requires Pompidou to stay true to the legacy of his great predecessor every day in every way.

In monetary affairs, it will be remembered, de Gaulle was a gold bug. His answer to all problems was a devaluation of the dollar against gold.

The Western nations, with France going along, decided that issue against him three years ago. But for Pompidou the call to show faithful Gaullist colors was irresistible.

Paris, once more, offered as its contribution to the monetary crisis a call for devaluation of the dollar against gold.

Britain's clear interest in the monetary crisis was an upward revision of the German mark and most of the other European currencies.

That way British goods would sell more readily on the continent, and European investment funds would flow to Britain. An improved economic condition would be the result, thus enhancing the British position in all foreign policy matters.

But the government of Prime Minister Edward Heath has pitched its future on entry into the Common Market. Rightly or wrongly, Heath has always felt that the route to Brussels lies through Paris.

His government has been chary of differing from the government of Pompidou even on the issue of gold. So London has played a passive role in the monetary crisis.

With the Big Three across the Atlantic thus constrained, there was prepared an opening for American initiative.

The United States in the past has stood for more flexible exchange rates to promote automatic adjustment without development of recurrent crisis.

Off that position it would have been easy for American officials to express sympathy for everybody involved, to urge a jointly managed revaluation with a pledge to move towards a larger reform of the whole system later on.

Because large speculative movements of money are involved, governments have to tell lies during currency crises. Perhaps Washington did, in fact, play the role outlined above.

But that is not the impression given by the public rhetoric of the Treasury, nor received by sensitive observers at the International Monetary Fund.

The chief statement from the Treasury was a repudiation of the former support for flexible exchange rates. Connally said that no change in the value of major currencies is "necessary or anticipated."

The impression, even in highly sophisticated circles, was that the United States was throwing the crisis entirely onto the Europeans on the narrow, chauvinistic principle that any changes would be bad because they would have the effect of shaking still further confidence in the Nixon administration.

In the long run, the monetary crisis should sort itself out with no great damage. The technical problems are easily soluble. Politically, the crisis could even have the useful effect of stimulating the West Germans to take a more active role in promoting West European unity.

But the problem of American relations with Europe persists. A less self-centred approach in Washington, a disposition to help other countries manage their problems, seems required if even minimal cohesion is to be maintained in meeting common problems.

Unprecedented Visit

Russian Arctic Main Interest Of Trudeau Tour

By HENRY SHAPIRO, from Moscow

Prime Minister Trudeau's upcoming official visit to the Soviet Union, the first by a Canadian prime minister, will include a 10,000-mile journey from Central Asia to the permafrost of Siberia.

Trudeau, who starts his 10-day trip on May 17, will be the first Western prime minister to have the opportunity to speak with the Soviet leadership since the conclusion of the 24th Communist Party Congress.

The trip has been described by the Soviet press as a reflection of the progress of Canadian-Soviet relations. This assessment was published by the authoritative weekly New Times last October.

Trudeau was scheduled to visit the Soviet Union at that time, but his plans were abruptly changed by the kidnap crisis in Quebec. Soviet Premier Kosygin displayed understanding and sympathy for Canada's internal problems and gave Trudeau carte blanche for fixing the next convenient date.

Canadian officials set the next date for May 17 when Trudeau, his wife Margaret, Foreign Minister Mitchell Sharp and other high-ranking officials begin what some diplomats have said will be a voyage of "Canadian discovery" to the Soviet Union.

Since last October, relations between the two nations have not changed. Therefore, the New Times magazine statement can still be taken as timely.

Identical Problems

The magazine, closely reflecting the views of the Soviet foreign ministry said:

"The first visit paid to the Soviet Union by a Canadian prime minister will take place against a background of progress in the relations between the two countries.

"The desire of the Canadian ruling circles to develop relations with the Soviet Union is due largely to the existence of identical scientific and technological problems in the use of natural resources and hydraulic construction, transport services, development of northern territories and agriculture."

Trudeau's main host will be Kosygin. But since Party Secretary Leonid Brezhnev has been taking an increasingly active role in the conduct of foreign policy, he too will unquestionably participate in the discussions.

Bilateral and international problems are on the agenda. The development of Soviet-Canadian trade, scientific and technological co-operation in the Arctic area, cultural exchanges, European security and the Middle East will be included in the talks, diplomatic sources said.

The visit includes a 10,000-mile journey through the Soviet Eurasian sub-continent which takes in a variety of Soviet exotica from the fabled Central Asian city of Samarkand to the perma-frozen city of Norilsk.

Norilsk, population 100,000, will be the northernmost Siberian point ever visited by a Canadian official.

Joint Interest Concept

Some Canadian diplomats consider Norilsk the high point of Trudeau's trip. Because of his interest in Arctic problems and the fact the Soviet Union and Canada are the two greatest Arctic powers, Trudeau was said to be anxious to establish "the concept of joint interest in the Arctic."

At Norilsk, Trudeau will be shown how the Russians are solving problems of ordinary living and of municipal administration in the cold climate.

He will have further opportunities for a glimpse at Soviet Arctic management in the city of Murmansk and at the arctic Institute of Leningrad.

Canada's largest ethnic minority, the Ukrainians, will also follow with interest Trudeau's visit to ancient Kiev, the Ukrainian capital, where his host will be politburo member and Ukrainian premier Vladimir Shcherbitszky.

The official talks in Moscow will take three days but they will be interspersed with cultural pursuits such as seeing Russian classical plays and ballets.

Canadian ambassador John Ford, a veteran diplomat who is also a poet well versed in Soviet culture and has translated Russian poetry into English, will accompany the Trudeaus on part of the trip.

Culture Leads To Riches—Getty

J. Paul Getty, the billionaire oil man, is coming out today with a book entitled How To Be a Successful Executive.

Getty, a former Oxford scholar, waxes considerably less than enthusiastic over the value of a formal education along business administration lines as the proper background for becoming a sucessful administrator.

He leans more toward the arts and humanities as necessities for study in advance of business success. The subjects that expanded his cultural horizons have served him best in his business career, Getty says.

Today's young executive, according to Getty, has two choices. He can concentrate on useful disciplines "or he can choose to become a well-rounded man — a man of taste, discernment, understanding and intellectual versatility."

If he selects the former, Getty writes, he is "quite likely to remain a junior or middle-grade executive throughout his career. If he chooses the latter, he will greatly increase his chances of reaching the top—and he will enjoy life and himself much more in the process."

The author does a competent job of destroying the myth of the organization man — the myth that success necessarily awaits such a person.

"I contend that the individualist — the man who risks unmarked roads and takes a great many hard knocks en route — possesses an immense advantage over any conformist, organization type," Getty writes.

Getty harks back to early acquaintances destined to become millionaires and suggested each "refuted the myth of the bland businessman" and, in fact, "seemed to demonstrate that the more multihued an individual's character, the better his chances for achieving success."

He lauds their common traits of "imagination, initiative and resiliency."

Getty observes that during five decades of his own business career, he has found that all too many men know less about themselves than they do about almost any subject under the sun. In interviewing applicants for executive positions, Getty took to asking the following question:

"If you were required to describe yourself and your views and attitudes on business in three sentences and no more, what would those sentences be?"

The author reports the answers "provided reliable indications of the individual's true personality and innermost thoughts — if for no other reason than that it is human under such circumstances to state first things first."

'Vietnamization' Also 'De-Americanization'

Ky Fans Nationalism

By J. T. WOLKERSTORFER, from Saigon

Vietnamization of the South Vietnamese armed forces, upon which American withdrawal from the Indochina war is predicated, is having significant political ramifications. Equally important are the areas in which Vietnamization has failed to bring about important political changes.

The process regarded as "Vietnamization" by Americans is looked upon as "de-Americanization" by Vietnamese, and it has led to a resurgence of nationalism in many areas.

The new spirit of nationalism is likely to be a major issue in the October presidential elections, and the cause of a widening split between President Nguyen Van Thieu and Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky, the probable opponents in the elections.

The new nationalism also has reduced American influence and has brought a rash of apparent anti-American feeling to the surface. Talking with reporters recently in the old imperial capital of Hue, Ky clarified his position:

"I want South Vietnam free of all outside influence, whether American, North Vietnamese, Chinese, Russian or any other kind. I am a nationalist. I want to see South Vietnam free both from communist domination and influence and from American domination and influence. We can co-exist with both North Vietnam and the United States, if people will respect our freedom and independence."

Ky also declared that no South Vietnamese government could be viable unless it represented all the people of South Vietnam, "including the people of the other side" — former Viet Cong and Viet Cong sympathizers.

While Ky is emphasizing that his platform is one of nationalism, reconciliation, co-existence, American withdrawal and, "above all, the end to a war that has gone on too long," Thieu has reiterated his anti-communist and pro-American policy: no coalition, no co-existence.

Another issue is the possible American influence on the elections, which was believed to be considerable in the 1967 presidential voting. There is widespread acceptance of the idea that Ky gave up his bid for the presidency and agreed to take the second spot on Thieu's ticket only after American intervention.

This year, the Americans probably couldn't talk Ky out of running if they wanted to. Vietnamization, the withdrawal of 250,000 American troops, the probable withdrawal of nearly 100,000 more by election time, and the new nationalism have reduced American influence here.

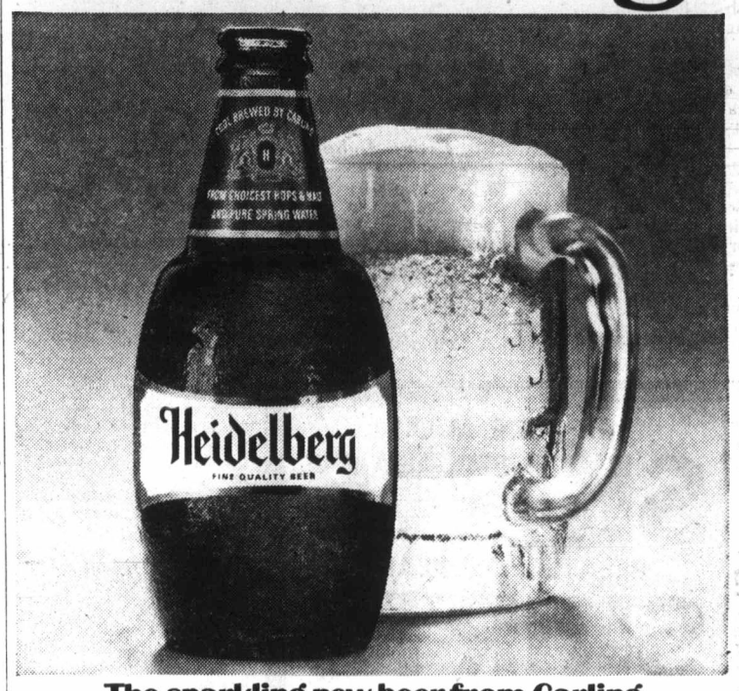

South Vietnamese officials have been forced for years to make concessions to the Americans because the United States has controlled as well as supported the country.

That is no longer true, and many Vietnamese officials are asserting themselves. Americans sometimes have trouble getting visas, are searched thoroughly while going through customs, are stopped for traffic violations by the police — all things that were generally unheard of just a few months ago.

Says one longtime Saigon observer: "The United States now is in the awkward position of being hated by half the people because it intervened in Vietnam in the first place and caused widespread devastation, and by the other half of the people who feel that they depended on the United States and are now being deserted."

The concept of a national government is still utterly foreign to many people in rural areas and even in Saigon, the government means little to the average citizen.

Chinatown Celebration

New Lion to Dance

By BROCK KETCHAM

Bessie Tang gets angry when anyone calls her lion a dragon.

However, she must admit her lion, which actually belongs to the Victoria Chinatown Lions Club, is an unusual one.

He is more colorful than a tropical bird, his head is made of papier-mache and bamboo and his body is made of cloth.

Harmless Beast

The beast is really quite harmless. "He can move his mouth and he can eat food, but he's a vegetarian and not a meat-eater. People don't have to be afraid of him, you know," laughed Mrs. Tang, of 2624 Douglas.

Chinatown Lions Club sadly decided its 15-year-old dancing lion should retire, so a new, hand-made lion was purchased from Hong Kong.

Grand Debut

"We'll start British Columbia's next 100 years off with a new lion. It will make a grand debut Wednesday," Mrs. Tang said, referring to a Chinese pageant to be held 8 p.m. Wednesday at Centennial Square as a salute to B.C.'s centennial year.

Proudly pointing to the dormant old lion, which resembles the new one, she said, "This is a most magnificent animal. When a skillful dancer operates it, he comes to life just like a big pussycat."

Referring to the new lion, Mrs. Tang said it couldn't dance in public without first being dedicated.

Blessing Sought

"Jack (Mrs. Tang's husband, the public relations officer of the Chinatown Lions) will take the new lion down to the Masonic Temple on Fisgard where they have a shrine to the patron saint Wah Kwong.

"They will ask for blessing from Wah Kwong for the lion so that he will be lively and will dance for the good of the people," she said.

Mrs Tang explained that the patron saint Kwong takes particular interest in anything to do with dancing and kung foo, the Chinese art of self defence.

'Very Tiring'

She said it takes years of practice for one to perform the lion dance properly.

"The average person lasts only five minutes under the lion," she said. She explained the lion dance is a very tiring procedure.

Mrs. Tang said two dancers are required to bring the lion to life. One dancer, she said, gets underneath the head of the lion while the other dancer firmly grasps the sheet attached to the lion's head.

Gloom Dispelled

Mrs. Tang said a rhythm is beat on drums, gongs and cymbals according to what the lion is doing.

"People burn firecrackers and the lion dances to them. The lion creates a lot of excitement and dispels gloom.

"The lion can do roll-overs and pretty near everything a live lion can do, but it depends on the skill of the dancers," she said.

Mrs. Tang pointed out the strings inside the lion's head attached to moveable eyelids and said the dancer must hold the head up with both hands while operating the strings with his teeth.

Opera Costumes

She proudly displayed colorful opera costumes recently imported from Hong Kong. These will be used in Chinese cultural folk dances at Centennial Square.

Completely hand-made, the costumes are intricately sequined and beaded.

Outlining various other attractions at the Chinese pageant, Mrs. Tang said tracks will be laid in Centennial Square to commemorate the completion of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

"Good grief — I don't know how that's going to work out," she said. She added the tracks will be removed after the pageant.

Walkers Leave Socks, Jackets

There's still a carton of jackets, sunglasses, odd socks and shoes and a couple of watches at the Miles for Millions headquarters in the Student Union Building at the University of Victoria.

Most of it, left in the wake of Saturday's charity march, was not very valuable, organizer Bob Ballam said Monday.

Organizer Bruce McKean said he had driven round the 25-mile route covered by the walkers on Saturday and found remarkably little litter.

"There was the odd shoe, looking rather lonesome," he said.

The last walkers, a party of about 10, checked in at the student building at 11:02 p.m. Saturday, McKean said.

He hopes to have a figure by Friday on the number of persons who started and finished the walk.

Colin Haggie, director of registration, gave an estimate Monday of 5,000 finishing out of 7,500 to 10,000 starting.

He said the registration form, while complete, is also complicated and young children probably found it difficult to understand. This could have resulted in them neglecting to deposit the required stub when they started the walk.

Officials are hoping they will have $100,000 to distribute to local and other charities.

Firebombs Discovered

NEW YORK (AP) — Cleaning women found two firebombs fastened beneath seats in the Radio City Music Hall early Sunday and summoned police who located a third in the world's largest theatre.

Bomb squad detectives deactivated the devices. A few hours later all 6,200 seats were filled with a Mother's Day crowd that was largely unaware of the danger that had been averted.

New Medicare Cost Figures

No Drastic Change?

By JOHN MATTERS

The B.C. Medical Association said Monday that the costs of medicare "may not show any drastic change" when the new list of doctors' earnings is published this summer.

The timing of the statement indicated the doctors had received an early, and possibly preliminary, computer printout from the B.C. Medical Services Commission of physicians' earnings during the fiscal year ended March 31.

Last fall, the commission, which administers medicare plans in B.C., published a 19-page booklet that listed the earnings of all doctors during the fiscal year that ended March 31, 1970. The total cash disbursement was $113.7 million.

While the booklet was actually circulated last September, its footnotes indicate the information was available last May 15, and possibly earlier.

In the BCMA's statement last weekend, the doctors explained the measures they are taking to control the earnings of certain colleagues who, during 1969-70, made above-average incomes. The made in the doctors' schedule of fees and "the process continues and will be reflected by our 1972 fee schedule."

(The fee schedule is the list of minimum charges for each type of service given by a physician. Under medicare, a doctor collects 90 per cent of his fee from the medical services commission.

(In addition to medicare subscribers, doctors often have patients who are private-payers and others whose bills are covered by such agencies as the Workmen's Compensation Board.)

"We must not fall into the trap of looking at medical care from the viewpoint of dollars alone," said the BCMA statement. "As each year comes along, it brings with it more medical knowledge and more ways and means for better diagnoses." BCMA is also trying to get more money for members of the profession whom it considers underpaid.

"At the moment, our association has suggested several adjustments in fees and more changes are on the way. Some fees have been lowered because proper statistics indicate they may have been too high," the statement read.

White House Backing

Move Launched To Revive SST

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Top Democratic and Republican leaders including President Nixon, Monday got behind a quiet move to reverse a congressional decision that grounded development of the U.S. supersonic transport.

The test will come today on an appropriations bill that carries $85.3 million to cover termination of government contracts with the plane's developers, Boeing and General Electric.

Pro-SST forces, with White House approval, will offer amendments to knock out the termination language but leave in the money, which then could be used to revive the project which congress killed in March.

The SST revival effort caught SST opponents off guard. "I thought it was dead," said Rep. Sidney Yates, (D—Ill.), who helped engineer the house turndown of the project into which the government already had poured about $860 million.

Advance forecasts on the new house test were cautious. However, both sides agreed that if the house changes its mind, reselling the project to the senate will be even tougher.

White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler said Nixon supported the move in congress by SST backers and that it appeared some of those who voted earlier to kill the SST project have now had second thoughts. But Ziegler gave no indication of whether the White House thought the new move to revive the controversial plane would succeed.

U.S. Army Dumping Hit by Suit

BUFFALO, N.Y. (UPI) — A conservation group Monday sought a federal court injunction that would bar the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers from dumping 285,000 cubic yards of sewage, phosphates and harmful metals into Lake Ontario.

The Monroe County Conservation Association filed suit against the corps, Buffalo district chief engineer Col. Ray Hansen and Secretary of the Army Stanley Resor.

The 6,000-member association said in its suit that the corps of engineers deposited the equivalent of 57,000 dump trucks full of pollutants into the lake last year and plans to deposit the same amount this year.

The suit said the pollutants would cause "great harm" to the lake which "is on the verge of death."

The suit said the dredgings constituted a "rape of public monies" because the city of Rochester has spent $24 million and Eastman Kodak has spent $8 million in sewage treatment efforts designed to clean the lake.

Wiretap Probe Opens

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As J. Edgar Hoover began his 48th year as FBI director, the Senate's best known criminal investigator said Monday that he had ordered an inquiry into federal and state wiretapping to calm "public uneasiness" about it.

Sen. John McClellan (D-Ark.) said he had directed the staff of his subcommittee on criminal laws and procedures "to undertake a comprehensive examination" of how government officials carry out wiretaps and of what legal controls limit them.

The justice department issued a brief statement saying that Attorney General John Mitchell had promised in a letter dated last Friday to give the subcommittee "every possible assistance."

McClellan, chairman of the Senate permanent investigations subcommittee, stressed in remarks inserted into the Congressional Record that he personally was satisfied that the government had not trampled any citizen's civil rights in using broadened surveillance powers provided by the 1968 Crime Control Act.

One of Hoover's chief critics, Sen. George McGovern (D-S.D.) marked the beginning of the director's 48th year on the job with a new attack.

McGovern, who has already said Hoover should resign, said he had documentary evidence that Hoover violated the U.S. Constitution by trying to discredit an airline pilot who criticized the FBI's handling of a hijacking case.

WOODWARD'S · THE ORIGINAL 1.49 STORES

BRIAN HOLLEY FIAT

3319 DOUGLAS AT CLOVERDALE, VICTORIA

The original Italian sports car.

We put the same spirit into a little family car.

The original Italian sports car was a tough, sure-footed little vehicle.

Tough, because it was ruggedly built.

Sure-footed, because the horsepower pulled it instead of pushing it.

So in honour of our famous ancestors, Fiat introduces the new Fiat 128. With front wheel drive.

Of course, we've added our own touches to the tradition.

To do the pulling, we hooked up one of the most rugged 1,116 cc. engines ever made. The chief designer was Aurelio Lampredi, who designed engines for Ferrari when Ferrari was at the top of the Grand Prix circuit.

This little powerhouse accelerates fast, has lots of torque at low speeds, and can drive full out hour after hour. It's all in the design. Such things as a five-bearing crankshaft, overhead cam and Weber carburetor.

Then we added independent four-wheel suspension, based on the simple MacPherson strut principle plus anti-roll bar. This new suspension, combined with the front wheel drive, and rack-and-pinion steering, lets the new Fiat 128 take corners ten miles an hour faster than it ought to. And still tuck in and hold you steady right around.

Then we added front disc brakes, plus a proportioning valve to keep the rear wheels from locking and to give you more control when you have to brake fast. We also added radial tires as standard equipment.

For the people who ride in our little chariot, we built in more room, more sturdiness, and more comfort. In three body styles. Two door. Four door. And station wagon. The passenger and luggage space inside the new Fiat 128 represents 80% of the total space. All the engine and mechanical components are packed into only 20%.

And because it is so big inside, and the floor is flat throughout, the new Fiat 128 will hold four good-sized adults. Comfortably.

Finally the trunk is 13 cubic feet big. Because the differential and the spare tire are up front.

But it's still the spirit of that original Italian sports car that makes the new Fiat 128 the tough, sure-footed little vehicle it is to-day.

Just drive one and feel it for yourself.

And ask your dealer about the Fiat Overseas Delivery Plan.

The new Fiat 128

The little chariot with the Italian sports car spirit. From $1998.*

Juggling Leaves U.K. Happy

The only country that seemed to be happy about juggling of the U.S. currency in European money markets was Britain.

As Germany, Belgium and Holland floated their currencies, and upward valuations were made in the Swiss franc and the Austrian schilling, British investors moved in to buy stocks and the London Stock Market rose a whopping 12.2 points as measured by the Financial Times index of industrials.

British hopes are based on a maintenance of higher valuations for European currencies which would help British trade with the Common Market area.

British investors are also looking for a lowering of interest rates this week by the bank of England as a move to slow down the inflow of unwanted U.S. dollars.

Lowering of the bank rate woud not only help solve this problem, but would stimulate British industry.

New York took the news fairly calmly, with stock prices moving moderately lower and with a weakness in the bond market.

For Canada, whose dollar is already floating in respect to the U.S. dollar, the situation did not diagnose so simply. Indeed in dollar exchange dealings, it was the U.S. dollar which showed the strength and the Canadian dollar the weakness.

There is considerable doubt as to what the ultimate outcome will be for Canadian exports to European countries where the currencies have been strengthened. Most of the Canadian exports to Europe are paid for in U.S. dollars so that the return to Candians will initially at least be paid for in diluted U.S. currency.

Canadian stocks were marked lower but trading was very light. The bond market continued to slip during the day, reflecting uncertainty as to whether another inflationary burst of higher interest rates may be imminent in the United States.

There was no definite pattern to the reaction of Canadian stocks. Most sections of the market were lower, with mines, oils and chemicals showing weakness along with the banks.

Industries heavily involved in the export business found little market support, although it was a three-month report by Falconbridge that brought the biggest individual loss of the day. Nickle-producing Falconbridge's earnings were down to 79 cents a share from $1.88 in the corresponding quarter of 1970, despite higher gross revenues. The unexpectedly poor showing caused Falconbridge stock to drop more than 13 points to $125.

Oil Companies

First-quarter earnings by oil companies are making brighter reading than those from other sectors of the economy.

Among the oil companies showing increased first-quarter earnings is Canadian Superior which turned a loss of $160,143 last year into a net profit of $1,536,379 (18 cents a share).

Central Del Rio net profit rose to $4,865,029 from $4,112,644, and Canadian Delhi to $367,000 from $241,000.

□

CP Rail Earnings

First-quarter earnings of Canadian Pacific Railway dropped modestly to $13,400,000 (87 cents a share) from $13,800,000 (90 cents) in the corresponding quarter of 1970.

Ian Sinclair, president, told last week's annual general meeting railway earnings were down largely because of difficult winter weather operations. Snow-clearing expenses alone rose by more than $2 million over the average.

On the other hand, earnings of CP (Bermuda) its sea transport division, were higher, largely because of a larger fleet.

One passenger ship was taken out of service while the Beaver ships gave inadequate returns. As a result the Beaverelm was sold; the Beaverpine converted to a cellular container ship, while the Beaverfir was left to handle the break-bulk cargo business. The mammoth tanker. T. G. Shaughnessy became available during the quarter for spot chartering before going into regular service on long-term chartering.

Output Down During March

OTTAWA (CP) — Industrial production edged down in March after a good February gain, but remained higher than a year ago, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported Monday.

The index of industrial production, based on 1961 output equalling 100, declined to 172.1 in March from 172.5 in February. It was 171.7 in January, and 169.6 in March last year.

Three Groups

The index measures output of about one-third of Canada's total production, covering mines, milling, quarries and oil wells, manufacturing, and the electric power, gas and water utilities. These three industrial groupings are most affected by boom and recessions in the economy.

Manufacturing output was down three-tenths of 1 per cent in March, with the index falling to 167.8 from 168.3 in February. It was 167.6 in March last year.

Narrow Boost

There was a narrow, one-tenth of 1 per cent increase in non-durable goods manufacturing, but a more serious seven-tenths of 1 per cent drop in durable goods.

Demand for durable goods, such as machinery and equipment, is an important factor in economic recovery. The durable goods manufacturing index in March was 190.2, compared with 191.5 in February and 191.2 in March last year.

While the over-all index was down slightly for the month, the average for the first quarter of 1971 showed some gain over the first quarter of 1970. The index showed signs of a significant slump last year as the year progressed, however, making some recovery by the year-end.

Talks Centre On Trading For Pacific Rim

VANCOUVER (CP)—Some 200 business leaders from Japan, Australia, New Zealand, the United States and Canada gather in Vancouver this week to exchange ideas about the problems of trading across the Pacific.

The occasion is the fourth annual meeting of the Pacific Basin Economic Co-operation Council, a group organized by Japanese and Australian businessmen in 1967.

Its main concerns are the elimination of tariffs and other trade barriers and the development of the newly-independent Asian nations.

Canada joined after strong urgings from Shigeo Nagano — head of Nippon Steel Corp. and PBECC's first president — and sent five delegates to its inaugural meetings in 1968.

"Canada, like a reluctant virgin, got dragged into the inaugural meeting," says Burnaby lawyer Arnold Hean, one of the moving forces behind Canadian participation.

This year, indicative of Canada's growing interest in the Pacific Rim, there are 84 Canadians at the conference. Most are from firms in Eastern Canada, although there are a few prominent Westerners.

In addition to Hean, who chairs one of PBECC's five standing committees, there is Robert Bonner, chairman of the four-day conference. He is a vice-president of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd., Canada's largest forest products firm, and a former attorney-general of British Columbia.

Cominco Ltd., which has extensive mining and smelting interests in British Columbia, has sent vice-president Gerry Hobbs. Leader of the Canadian delegation is K. H. J. Clarke, international sales president of International Nickel Co.

Are you investing for the 70's with stocks that were hot in the 60's?

A lot of investors thought their stocks would come back along with the market.
Some did.
But only the ones that were right for today's market. Which proves you can't take things like that for granted. The market now isn't just lower than it was in 1968. It's different.
For example, during the late sixties the only thing many investors seemed to care about was growth in earnings. Now we see a trend back to companies with strong balance sheets and relatively low price/earnings ratios.
So we think it's a good time for investors to take a fresh look at their portfolios. If you'd like us to help you do it, just mail the coupon with a list of your holdings.

One thing we'll watch for is stocks bought at inflated prices. In the past, speculative stocks have often dragged their feet after the first sharp rally following a severe bear market.
So don't be surprised if we tell you that some of those dear old blue chips you've been holding for years are the best things in your portfolio.
Of course our recommendations will depend on what you tell us in the coupon.
In the meantime, we'll keep looking for the trends that make the market go. We won't spot them all. Nobody does. But we do have twice as many analysts looking for them as any other broker.
We figure that puts the odds in our favour.

Chucalo kept at bay as Ellis jabs and moves away

Chuvalo Misses Again Foreman Adds Prestige

The favorites all came through Monday in the closed - circuit television heavyweight boxing triple-header, and that meant that Canadian George Chuvalo has again failed to beat a ranking opponent in his effort to get a title bout.

Jimmy Ellis, 31, the former World Boxing Association champion from Louisville, Ky., won a unanimous 10-round decision from the 33-year-old Canadian champion at Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens in the middle bout of the far-flung and unique venture.

TERRELL A WINNER

Ernie Terrell of Chicago, 32, also a former World Boxing Association champion, scored a unanimous 10-round decision in Chicago over Luis Faustino Pires, the Brazilian champion, in the opener.

Then in the 15-round finale from Oakland, undefeated George Foreman, the WBA's top-ranking contender to Joe Frasier's title, proved his previous victory over Argentine-veteran Gregorio Peralta was no fluke, knocking out his South American rival in the 10th round.

LIGHTER, BETTER

Ellis, who has won two fights since losing his share of the world championship a year ago, was 10 pounds lighter than in the Frasier bout at 191 pounds.

Much quicker than the 218½-pound Chuvalo, Ellis went to the attack quickly and opened a cut over his opponents left eye in the second round as he scored steadily with left jabs and right hooks.

By the fifth round, Ellis, on the way to his 29th victory in 35 professional fights, had opened up four cuts around the eye.

A LAST FLING

Dhuvalo came on in the eighth and ninth rounds, rocking Ellis with fluries of punches which brought the 6000 partisan fans some hope of victory. However, Ellis was able to keep out of serious trouble and Chuvalo's record stayed at 66 wins. He has had 85 professional fights.

Referee Sammy Luftspring had it 48-46 under the five-point must system while judges Tony Canzano and Jackie Silvers had Ellis in front by 49-43 and 48-44, respectively.

Each fighter was guaranteed $15,000 but Chuvalo may have lost his manager, Irving Ungerman, who claimed before the fight he would end his association with Chuvalo if Ellis won.

Foreman, 22, never appeared in trouble against Peralta after landing at least a dozen hard left jabs to the head in the first two rounds.

The 216-pound former Olympic champion, who took a unanimous but disputed 10-round decision over the Argentine in the previous meeting, cut Peralta's left eye area in the third round and then staggered him with two solid left hooks in the seventh.

Referee Elmer Costa stopped the fight at 2:52 of the 10th round after the 195-pound Peralta was sent into the ropes with a hard flurry of punches for the second time in the round.

Foreman was guaranteed $20,000 and Peralta, $10,000 for the fight, which attracted only about 7000 fans at the Oakland Coliseum Arena.

Terrell, winning his fifth successive bout since coming back from a three-year layoff, stunned Pires several times in a wild-swinging affair before an estimated 600 at the International Amphitheatre.

Promoter Joe Kellman, who guaranteed Terrell $12,000 and Pires $3,500, estimated that the experimental show probably resulted in an $8,000 to $10,000 loss for the Chicago phase of the tripleheader.

Orioles, Reds Continue to Stagger Blue Pitches Eighth Straight Win

Baltimore Orioles and Cincinnati Reds, handily the class in their respective leagues last year, are both having trouble defending their major league baseball championships.

Rated as an absolute cinch in the American League, the Orioles have been staggering a bit and Monday went down to their third successive defeat to drop two and a half games behind the idle Boston Red Sox in the Eastern Division.

As for the Reds, they also had themselves a lost weekend and now trail San Francisco Giants, the Western Division leaders in the National League, by 10½ games.

Orioles had their three top pitchers ready for the rest of the weekend after being weathered out Saturday but they could only manage four runs and 13 hits in the three games.

Monday, it was Bruce Del Canton, a refugee from the National League, who stopped them. He gave up five hits to pitch Kansas City Royals to a 4-1 win, defeating Dave McNally.

McNally just couldn't handle Amos Otis, who singled in the first run in the fifth inning and then hit a three-run homer in the seventh.

BLUE AGAIN

On Sunday, the Orioles had Mike Cuellar and Jim Palmer trumped by Jim "Catfish" Hunter and Vida Blue of the Oakland Athletics.

Hunter bested Cuellar, 6-2, in the first game, then the spectacular 21-year-old Blue pitched his eighth consecutive complete-game victory to edge Palmer, 2-1.

Palmer, 5-0 starting the game, struck out 11 and retired 18 successive batters in one stretch but a wild pitch, an error and a collision on the same play brought Athletics their runs.

Blue matched Palmer's four-hit performance and struck out nine to run his season's total to 78, the major-league high.

MARICHAL HOT

The Reds ran into Juan Marichal in top form on Monday and the result was a 3-2 victory for San Francisco Giants.

Marichal allowed only four hits, one of them a two-run homer by Tony Perez, and struck out five to boost his major-league strikeout total to 2001.

On Sunday, the Reds took a 7-2 battering from the lowly San Diego Padres, who are now only two games behind the defending champions.

In other National League games Monday, Chicago Cubs took Philadelphia Phillies, 3-0, as Ferguson Jenkins became the first pitcher in his league to win six games, St. Louis Cardinals outscored Montreal Expos, 8-5, and New York Mets edged Houston Astros, 2-1.

Victory for the Mets moved them a game ahead of the idle Pittsburgh Pirates but, best of all, it showed they could beat Wade Blasingame. The left-hander was 10-0 against the Mets until Bud Harrelson hit a two-run single in the seventh inning and Gary Gentry made it enough for the win.

Jenkins struck out 12, allowed only four hits and retired 17 men in order during one stretch in his overpowering performance.

Victoria United continues to cling to a thread of hope, but it now appears certain that Vancouver Columbus has won the Pacific Coast Soccer League championship.

Columbus blanked Pauls Canadians, 3-0, Sunday in the club's last regular-schedule match to move two clear points ahead of the Victoria team and claim the title outright.

LEAGUE SAYS 'NO'

And United officials learned late Monfay night that the Pacific Coast Soccer League executive had ruled "null and void" their protest filed following the April 24 game at Royal Athletic Park in which Columbus and Victoria fought to a scoreless tie. The protest concerned Columbus player-coach John Milner, still serving a 12-game suspension for striking a referee, who sat on the Columbus bench throughout the game.

The PCSL executive threw out the protest on the grounds that it was sent only to the B.C. Soccer Commission and not to the league executive as well, as it stipulates in the constitution.

United had the protest letter in the mail within the required 48 hours, but the league executive didn't receive it until last Saturday.

The Victoria club now plans to appeal to the B.C. Soccer Commission against the ruling, and if they "get no satisfaction there" they will appeal to the Canadian Soccer Commission.

IKE ENDS ON TOP

Centre-forward George Zambrano scored his 15th and 16th goals for Columbus in Sunday's game, to finish one goal behind the league's top scorer, Ike Mackay of Victoria United. Toto Ficic scored the other goal.

Third-place Croatia defeated Westminster Blues, 1-0, and fourth-place Eintracht downed North Shore Labatts, 1-0, to stay one point behind Crotia in the battle for playoff berths.

Mt. Douglas Seems Set To Defend Meet Title

Mt. Douglas appeared in an excellent position to launch its attack on a fourth straight championship in the Greater Victoria inter-high school track and field competition after the first round of heats Monday at Centennial Stadium.

WHERE IT COUNTS

From the five boys' and five girls' heats held, Mt. Douglas gained a leading 21 qualifiers including 14 in the all-important "A" section.

The point count for Friday's finals goes 15-10-7-6-5-4½ for individual events and 20-15-12-10-9-8 for relays in the "A" flight as compared to 4-2½-2-1½-1-½ for individual and 7-5-4-3-2-1 for relay events in "B" flight.

Oak Bay, which came within 35 points of dethroning Mt. Douglas last year after a disappointing fifth-place finish in 1969, was second Monday in total qualifiers, (17), and "A" flight entries, (10).

Mt. Douglas leads the chase for the boys' title with nine "A" and five "B" qualifiers while Esquimalt, third over-all with 16 qualifiers, leads the girls with seven "A" and five "B" entrants.

The meet is being organized this year by Reynolds, a newcomer to the competition last year, and for coach Jack Lusk the results are already pleasing.

The Reynolds squad, which placed a distant last, matched its total 1970 qualifying total of 10 on the first night and doubled its "A" total with four athletes cracking the lineup.

The championship has become an eight-school affair this year with the addition of Belmont, which managed three "A" qualifiers and 13 over-all on the opening night.

RUNOFFS NEEDED

Close competition was the order Monday but none so close as in the boys' 100 metres which will require two runoffs tonight at 4:45.

Brad Yakumbowich and Don Nemeth of Mt. Douglas finished one-two in qualifying in 11.1 and 11.5 seconds, respectively, but after that it became a log-jam and position in heats was necessary to break up tied times.

Leon Mitchell of Reynolds, Mike Smith of Mount View and Robert Hume of Mt. Douglas drew in at 11.6 but Matt Flynn of Victoria and Steve Hunter of Belmont, in a bundle at 11.7 will have to race again for an "A" berth.

ONE TOO MANY

Fighting for the remaining "B" berth will be Brian Doucette of Esquimalt and Duff McCaghey of Oak Bay, among four runners who were clocked in 11.8 but judged behind another runner in each heat.

Trials continue between 3:30 and 5:30 p.m. today and Wednesday. Friday's finals get underway at 10 a.m.

Chinese Reject Rugby Stop Ball Production

LONDON (Reuter) — The Chinese are refusing to export rugby balls to Britain because they think the game is barbarous and dangerous.

The Chinese attitude toward one of Britain's oldest sports was revealed in a letter to Peter Spall, head of a sporting goods company near London.

Spall's firm imports Chinese soccer balls to Britain from a plant near Tientsin. While on a visit to the plant, he saw rugby balls being made, and placed an order for 2,000.

But instead he received a letter from the factory saying rugby "is injurious to the health of the people," and the factory had stopped production.

Softball Leaders Lose First Game

Seabord Construction ended Bate Construction's four-game win streak in the Victoria Major Men's Softball League at Central Park Monday night — but needed a run in the last inning to do it.

Wayne Forslund scored in the first inning and then singled in pitcher Barry Wilkin for the winning run in the seventh inning.

Bates tied the game in the fifth inning when Bob Holness hit a triple and scored on Doug Boden's sacrifice fly.

Both teams kept the game tight and there were no errors.

Steelers Just Miss In Staying Winless

Tom Baxter slammed a two-run homer to spark a four-run burst in the second inning and lead Langford Drywall to a 6-5 victory over William Head Steelers in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League game at Heywood Avenue Park Monday night.

William Head, winless after three starts, took a 3-1 lead after the first inning, went behind 3-5 after two innings and then pulled to 4-5 with a run in the third. Tom Canfield scored three of William Head's runs.

THREE IN ROW

On Sunday, Colwood Inn ran its unbeaten streak to three games and took over sole possession of first place with a 4-0 win over Sooke Merchants.

In Sunday's other game, Bert Meek hit a two-run homer in the second inning to help Gilmour Construction to a 6-4 victory over Labatts.

Meek also accounted for two more runs in the four-run fifth inning with a single.

Telford Survives B.C. Tryout Test

VANCOUVER — Ray Telford, left back with Victoria United, is among eight players from the Pacific Coast Soccer League selected Sunday to try out for Canada's Pan-American and Olympic Games teams starting May 15 at Camp Borden, Ont.

Three players from Vancouver Columbus, goalkeeper Peter Greco, halfback Sam Lenarduzzi and forward Sergio Zanatta, have been chosen to attend the tryout camp which will screen 40 players from across Canada.

Greco and Lenarduzzi played in the Canadian team in the 1967 Pan-Am Games in Winnipeg and Greco was also in Canada's World Cup soccer team which played in the 1968 elimination rounds.

Others chosen from British Columbia are Billy Young of Pauls Canadians, Buzz Parsons of Eintracht, Len Brown of Croatia and Gary Thompson of the University of British Columbia.

Canada's first game la the Olympic Games elimination series will be played May 30 in Bermuda.

Nicklaus 1971 Earnings Already $131,787

DALLAS (AP) — Putting on a spectacular finish, Jack Nicklaus won the Byron Nelson Classic on Sunday to substantially increase his lead in earnings and points on the pro golf tour.

Victory, fashioned by scoring birdies on three of the last five holes, earned Nicklaus $25,000 and boosted his tournament income for the year to $131,787. It also gave him 130,607.5 points in the standings which determine the qualifiers for next year's tour.

Arnold Palmer, who finished seven strokes behind Nicklaus on Sunday to win $2,482, now has 1971 earnings of $106,535 and is the only other pro with more than $100,000 to his credit this year. Gary Player is next to Nicklaus in points but far behind with 94,144.3. Miller Barber ($98,531), Player ($94,775), Tom Shaw ($81,628), Lee Trevino ($71,485) and Frank Beard ($71,433) follow Nicklaus and Palmer on the money-winning list.

Next to Nicklaus, Beard made the biggest gain among the leaders Sunday by finishing in a second-place tie with Jerry McGee at 276, two strokes in arrears, and winning $11,575.

Nicklaus broke away from the closely-bunched field when he birdied the 14th, 15th and 16th holes and finished with a final-round 66 which retained the title he won last year in a playoff with Palmer.

McGee, the first-round leader, picked up a lot of ground with a closing 65 which was the best score of the day. And Beard passed third-round leader, Charles Coody, who had a 71, by shooting a 67. Coody, recent winner of the Masters was fourth and won $9,850.

George Knudson of Toronto finished near the bottom with 294 and won $169.

Orr (2), Bucyk, Perreault Win Trophy Voting

Chicago-defenceman Pat Stapleton played Sunday without face mask and showing prominently was the stitching job necessary after skate cut suffered in Thursday game. It was reported that 52 stitches were needed to close gaping wound but Stapleton said he counted 70 and wasn't through when he gave up.

MONTREAL (CP) — Bobby Orr of Boston Bruins was presented with two trophies Monday at the National Hockey League's award luncheon but he said he'd settle for one that got away — the Stanley Cup.

Orr, who last year won the Ross Trophy as the top scorer, the Norris Trophy as the top defenceman, the Hart Trophy as the most valuable player and the Smythe Trophy as the outstanding player in the Stanley Cup playdowns, retained the Norris and Hart trophies.

FOUR IN ROW

It was the fourth successive time in his five-year career that the 23-year-old defenceman has won the Norris Trophy. That matched the record of Doug Harvey, who also won it on three other occasions.

In retaining the Hart Trophy, Orr became the second defenceman to win it twice. Eddie Shore, selected in 1933, 1935, 1936 and 1938, was the first. Gordie Howe leads with six Hart Trophy selections.

Two of Orr's teammates also took trophies. Phil Esposito won the Ross Trophy for scoring a record 152 points, exactly half of them goals. And John Bucyk, who had only eight minutes in penalties, was named the winner of the Lady Byng Award as the player best combining ability and good conduct on the ice.

Other winners were Gilbert Perreault of Buffalo Sabres, who won the Calder Trophy as the season's best rookie, and Ed Giacomin and Gilles Villemure of New York Rangers, who combined to win the Vezina Trophy, which goes to the goalkeepers on the team permitting the fewest goals against.

Orr was a handy winner in the balloting for the Norris Trophy but got stiff competition from Esposito before the most-valuable-player award was decided.

It was almost unanimous as top defenceman with 208 out of a possible 210 points and Brad Park of New York Rangers a distant second at 57 points. J. C. Tremblay of Montreal Canadiens and Pat Stapleton of Chicago Black Hawks were next with 35 and 23 points, respectively.

Orr had 151 points and Esposito 127 in the Hart Trophy balloting in a two-man battle which left Bobby Hull of the Hawks third with 28 points and Dave Keon of Toronto fourth with 20 points.

It was also fairly close in Lady Byng Award balloting. Bucyk, who had never won it before, got 166 points while Keon, a two-time winner in the past, drew 131 points. Jean Ratelle of the Rangers was a distant third with 34 points and then came Bobby Hull with eight.

Perreault, who set records with 38 goals and 72 points, was expectedly a runaway winner for the rookie award. He received 204 points with Jude Drouin of Minnesota North Stars next with 68 and Villemure third with 48 points.

Tom Webster of Detroit Red Wings and Dale Tallon of Vancouver Canucks were fourth and fifth with 25 and 12 points, respectively.

Winners of the Hart, Norris, Lady Byng and Calder Trophies will get $1,500 each and the runners-up are to receive $750.

Canadiens Confident After Fine Comeback

MONTREAL — Montreal Canadiens were in confident mood Monday as they prepared for the fourth game of the Stanley Cup final while Chicago Black hawks were still simmering a bit about the refereeing in Sunday's game.

"When my team plays like that I know we're going to win," said Montreal-coach Al MacNeil after Sunday's 4-2 victory which left his club trailing the best-of-seven series, 1-2.

COMPLAINT

"We weren't helped by the refereeing, for sure," said Chicago-coach Billy Reay while Stan Mikita claimed that it was what wasn't called that hurt the losers.

Reay and Mikita both felt that the turning point came when Pete Mahovlich upended defenceman Keith Magnuson, stole the puck and scored Canadiens first goal.

The play came in the sixth minute of the second period and the Hawks felt that the burly centreman should have had a penalty, a call which would have left them leading by 2-0.

But the Hawks met a far different club Sunday than the one which lost the first two games in Chicago. Canadiens tried to carry the action from the start and held an edge throughout. They dropped behind and took a long time to go ahead mainly because they had trouble finishing off their plays.

The forcing play bothered the Hawks as much as it had bothered Canadiens in the first two games, bringing errors and penalties often enough to eventually prove costly.

Hawks cashed in on a penalty to Pete Mahovlich for the game's first goal, Bobby Hull setting up Cliff Koroll. Then Hull got credit for his 11th goal of the current playdowns when the puck, shot by Jim Pappin, hit him as he was being pushed out of the play. It deflected high past the surprised Ken Dryden and it seemed Hawks were on their way to a third straight win.

Tonight's game will be televised on Channels 2 and 6 and broadcast on radio station CBU (690) starting at 5.

BOTHERSOME PAIR

But they couldn't cope with a club which this time didn't quit skating and they particularly had trouble with the Mahovlich family.

After Pete had cut the lead in two, Frank tied it up late in the second period with the Hawks playing two men short. The veteran winger was allowed to work his way in and his blasting shot was too hot to handle.

Defenceman Terry Harper, who got to enjoy the rarity of Montreal Forum cheers for his performance, set up the winning goal with a fine rush which carried him in behind the Chicago goal and drew two checkers.

A third Hawk went to the boards as Jean Beliveau moved in to help out but Harper managed to slide the puck out front.

COOL PAIR

Waiting for it were Yvan Cournoyer and John Ferguson, and they were so alone that Ferguson calmly moved out of the firing line as Cournoyer carefully picked his spot and fired past Tony Esposito.

Frank Mahovlich, tying the playoff record of 13 goals set last year by Phil Esposito, blasted in the insurance goal less than six minutes later and the Hawks, tiring badly, were no serious threat in the remaining time.

Both goals by the elder Mahovlich came while Bobby Hull was in the penalty box and the Hawks appeared to seriously miss his services as a penalty-killer.

NO CHANGES

Neither club announced any lineup changes for tonight's game. The series moves to Chicago Thursday for the fifth game and if a sixth is needed it will be in Montreal on Sunday.

Gorge Vale Pair To Take On Pros

The chase for the Vancouver Island Open golf championship is down to a field of two professionals, both former Victorians, and two Gorge Vale amateurs following Sunday's quarter-final matches at Gorge Vale.

Advancing to next Sunday's 36-hole semi-finals at Uplands are professionals Bill Wakeham of Cowichan and Norm Boden of Marsh Meadows and amateurs Bob Beauchemin, the 16-year-old medalist, and 45-year-old Reg Clarkson.

TOUGH TIME

Clarkson had the stiffest battle on Sunday coming from behind twice on the back nine to oust former city amateur champion Rick Kent of Glen Meadows on the 18th green.

Boden defeated Royal Colwood amateur Jim McMurran, 2 and 1; Wakeham stopped Uplands' assistant-pro Don Billsborough, 4 and 2; and Beauchemin won an all-junior match from Colwood's Sid Murdoch, 4 and 2.

Clarkson's sand wedge was his salvation on Sunday. One down after nine holes, he came up with tremendous chips from traps to win the 10th hole and halve the 12th and 14th holes.

Kent went up a hole again on the 16th when he sank a two-foot birdie putt, but Clarkson drew even on the 17th hole with a par and took the match when Kent ran into trouble in deep rough after hooking his drive on the 18th tee.

Beauchemin, whose first shot of the day hooked wildly into tall timber and forced him to declare a lost ball, conceded the first hole to Murdoch's par four. However, he halved the second, won the third and was never again threatened.

Wakeham and Billsborough were even with approximate 39s, two over par, for the first nine holes but Wakeham exploded to win the next four holes with a birdie and three pars and was one-over par when the match ended.

Boden scrambled to his victory over McMurran, the two-time winner, being approximately nine-over par for the 17-holes needed.

In the handicap division for the Hugh Francis Trophy, George Murphy and Harry Panteluk of Gorge Vale advanced to the semi-finals along with Doug Hunt of Cedar Hill and Marty Smith of Uplands.

Murphy downed clubmate Pat Thody, 5 and 4; Panteluk stopped Uplands' Al Brown, 5 and 4; Smith finished 1-up over Greg Barnes of Cedar Hill and Hunt stopped clubmate Ray Saxon on the 18th.

Duncan Cricket XI Shares League Lead

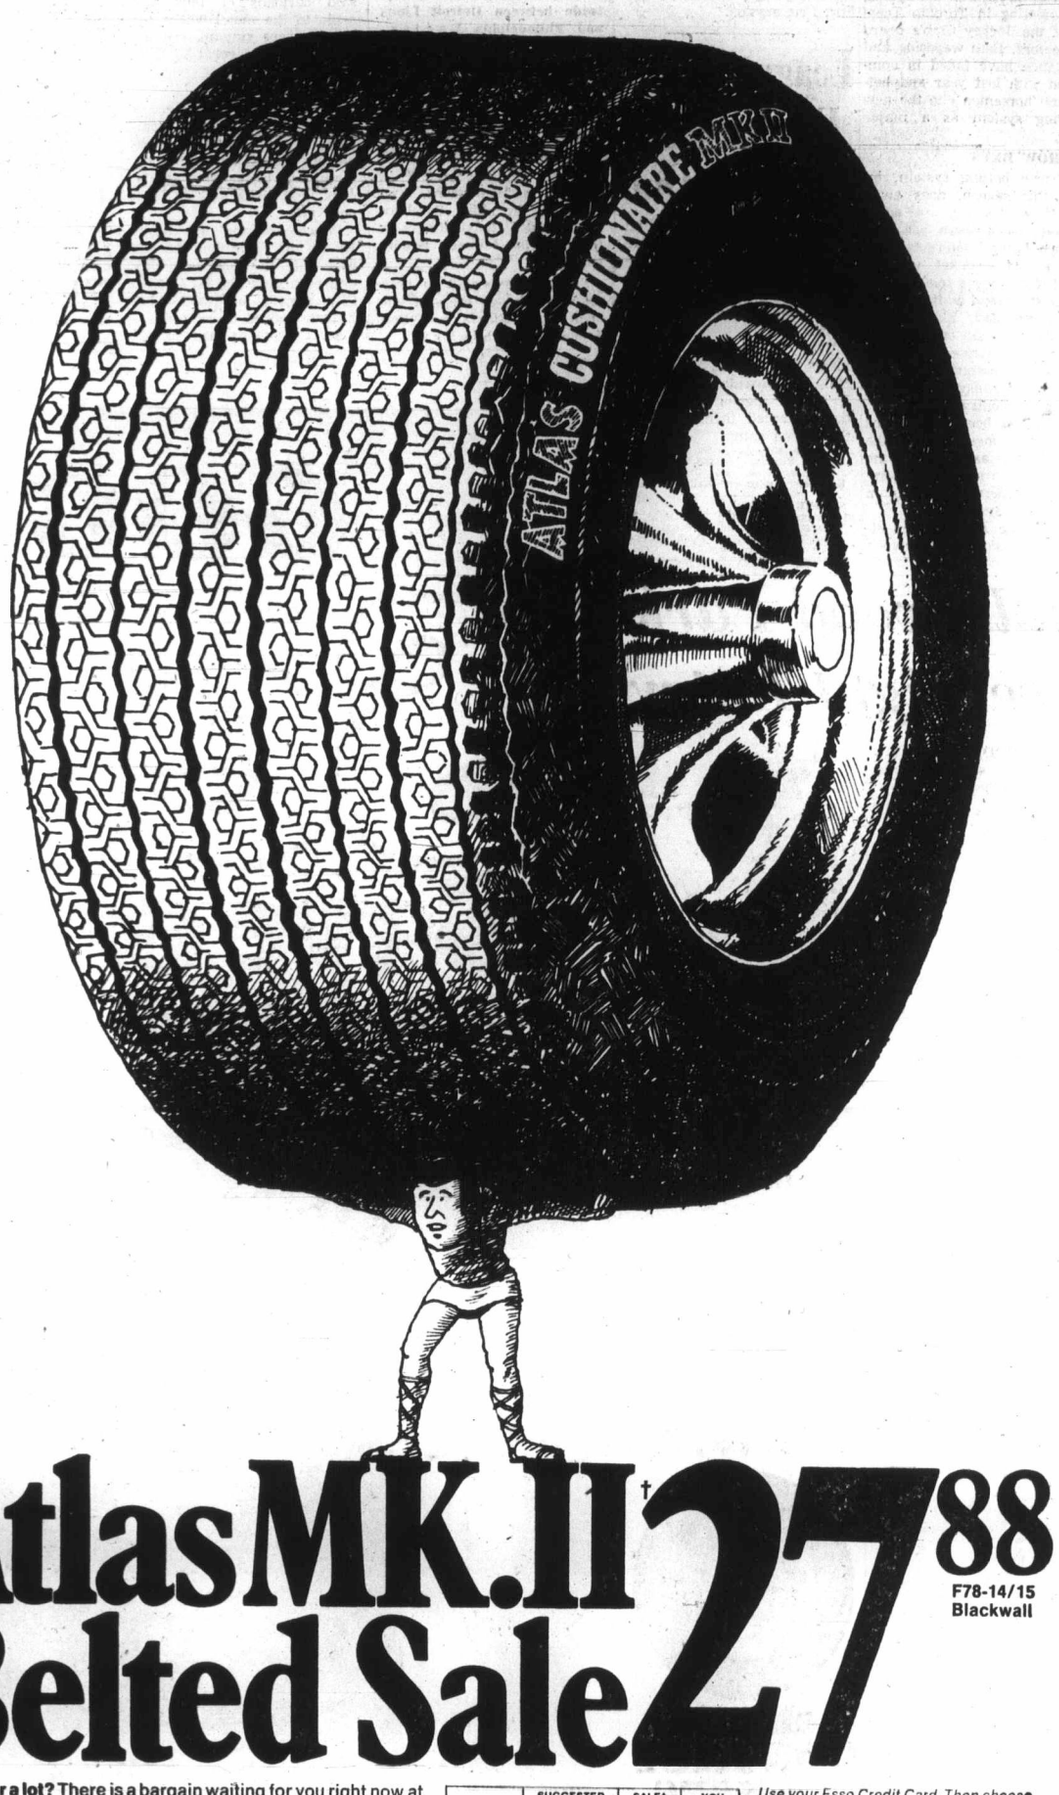

Cowichan moved into a first-place tie with Albions in the Victoria and District Cricket Association on Sunday with a five-wicket victory over Oak Bay at Beacon Hill Park.

Peter Wilson took four wickets for 14 runs as Oak Bay was dismissed for 67, including 12 not out by junior John Courtenay. Brian Gorman's 25 not out led Cowichan to 68 for five wickets.

In Sunday's other game, Alcos evened their record with a two-wicket victory over Incogs at University School.

Geoff Rooper scored 22 runs as Incogs reached 91, all out, with Alco bowlers Joe Armstrong and Mike Dodd taking three wickets for seven runs and four for 14, respectively.

John Moss, with 40 runs, and Dodd, with 24, led Alco batsmen to 95 for eight.

New Betting Plan Could Get Blame

FORT ERIE, Ont. (CP) — Two meetings this week could decide the fate of the new betting system at Jockey Club racetracks and whether there will be the threat of a strike by horsemen that could close the tracks.

The betting situation is expected to be high on the agenda at a meeting in Toronto Tuesday of the Jockey Club's board of directors. Both wagering and attendance have faded in comparison with last year and bettors and horsemen cite the new wagering system as a major factor.

NO SHOW BETS

The new betting system, invoked this season, does away with show betting, as such. However, when there are nine or more betting interests in a race, a place ticket will be cashed if the horse selected finishes first, second or third.

On Wednesday, also in Toronto, Jockey Club officials will meet representatives of horsemen from thoroughbred and standardbred ranks to draw up a new purse contract.

There have been suggestions that the horsemen would strike if any effort was made by the Jockey Club to reduce winners' purses to underwrite losses on the wagering system.

Prior to the Fort Erie meet, the 21-day session at Greenwood in Toronto reported wagering down $675,964 and attendance off by 1537 compared with figures for the 1970 Greenwood meet.

In the first 16 days of the Fort Erie meet, wagering has dropped $1,839,543 from the $8,065,846 reported during the corresponding period in the 1970 Fort Erie session.

Argos Trade Don Jonas To Bombers

TORONTO — Toronto Argonauts, so far the busiest traders this season in the Canadian Football League announced Monday they had traded quarterback Don Jonas to the Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

Jonas shared the quarterbacking last season with Tom Wilkinson but both became expendable when Argos signed Notre Dame-rookie Joe Theismann and Greg Barton, who had figured in an NFL trade between Detroit Lions and Philadelphia Eagles. Wilkinson was traded to B.C. Lions last month.

In return for Jonas and "a future consideration," Argos will receive two Canadian players — defence-end Joe Vijuk and defence-back Ward Smith, a former B.C. Lion.

Vijuk, a 245-pounder, was obtained by the Bombers from Ottawa Rough Riders in the deal for fullback Dennis Duncan.

Smith is expected to play regularly, taking the spot left open when Riders sent Ron Arends to Calgary

Ontario Team Seeks to Avoid Return

ST. CATHARINES, Ont. (CP) — Coach Frank Milne of St. Catharines Black Hawks said Sunday the sixth game of the Eastern Canadian Junior A hockey finals should be moved out of Quebec City for the protection of the St. Catharines players.

He said Black Hawks players were pelted by debris, including a knife, during Saturday's fourth game at Quebec City. Later their bus was surrounded by 2,000 bottle-throwing fans. Then he said carloads of fans laid seige to the motel where the Hawks were staying, circling the motel for several hours in their cars.

At Saturday's game, a crowd of 13,410 fans bombarded the St. Catharines players' bench with potatoes, tomatoes, bolts from seats, eggs, golf balls and at least one knife.

Police escorted the Black Hawks to their bus at the rear of the Quebec City Coliseum after the 6-1 Quebec City victory in which Guy Lafleur scored three goals.

St. Catharines has moved its two remaining home games to Toronto and Milne said the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association should order Friday's game to be played either in Montreal or Toronto.

A sixth game may not be necessary, however. Quebec leads the best-of-seven series 3-1 and a win Wednesday at Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto would wrap up the Richardson Trophy for the Remparts.

Milne said he would discuss the situation with St. Catharines' president Fred Muller today, suggesting that an appeal be made to the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association to have the sixth game moved.

Muller, in Montreal to watch Sunday's Stanley Cup playoff game, was not available for comment.

Double Winner

Tom Morris of Victoria Wheelers pedalled his way to victory twice over the weekend. Riding at Couer D'Alene, Idaho, on Saturday, Morris finished ahead of Calgarians Kevin Sirois and Hank Koning in a 107-mile race. Larry Kernan of Victoria Wheelers was fourth. On Sunday, Morris proved his stamina by moving to Spokane to beat out clubmate Ross Darnell, who was second, and Koning in a 50-mile race.

JEST A MINUTE By BOB CUMBERBIRCH
Friend of ours is just mad about those nude calendars. He even has a picture of Whistler's mother with her shawl off . . .

The shoe clerk had opened up just about every box for his woman customer. When there was only one left on the shelf, the woman said:
"I don't really want to buy today. I was looking for a friend."
"Well," said the clerk, "I'll take down the last one if you think she's in it."

The old inmate greeted his new cell partner with the question: "How long are you in for?"
"Twenty-five years," the new prisoner replied.
"Then you take the bed nearest the door," said the old timer. "You will be getting out first."

"How long," asked the psychiatrist, "have you thought you were a dog?"
The patient reflected for a moment, then replied: "Well, I guess ever since I was a puppy."

Rest Homes' Envoys Make No Headway

A delegation representing B.C. rest home operators left Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi's office in an unhappy frame of mind Monday after a meeting lasting more than an hour.

Spokesmen for the group said later as far as the delegates were able to tell from the minister's comments, the "basic rate" for welfare patients remains at $150 a month.

The recent increase in the rate, to a maximum of $174 a month which was announced by Gaglardi, they said, apparently applies only to those who qualify as "heavy-care cases," which means those practically requiring nursing care on a 24-hour basis.

John Hanrahan, of Victoria, vice-president of the B.C. Rest Homes Association, said no decision could be reached on the association's earlier stand that eviction notices would be served on all welfare patients until the membership has been consulted.

James Galloway, a director of the association, said he felt rest homes operators were "in the same revolving door we started in a year ago."

"We're not exactly fools," Galloway said, "and it seems to be more than a coincidence that the basic federal pension has been increased by $24 a month, exactly the same amount as the increase in payments which welfare patients can receive.

"This means there will be no increase in cost to B.C., with a good possibility they will actually save some money because patients must be classified as heavy-care cases before they qualify for the extra $24."

Gaglardi later told reporters the increase to a maximum of $174 was made on the recommendation of a special committee of health department officials and had been accepted by the government.

"They (rest home operators) say they should get more," the minister added, "and I told them we would take another look at the rates."

Fugitive Has Tattoos

Two tattoos were listed in the description issued Monday by Colwood RCMP and officials of the William Head minimum security prison for a young inmate who escaped Saturday night from the Metchosin-area institution.

The fugitive, Robert Michael Duschene, who is to celebrate his 21st birthday in 11 days, was described as six feet tall, weighing 160 pounds, of medium build and fair complexion and with hazel eyes, brown hair and the tattoos.

One on his left forearm contained a rabbit head and the name Butch. The other on his right forearm has the words Bob and Love.

Duchesne, who was said to have "walked away" from the prison, was sentenced last Jan. 7 in Vancouver to a total of slightly more than 2½ years for break-ins. He was to have been released Oct. 18, 1972, and authorities said he is not considered dangerous.

Peterson Answers, After Being Pressed

Motorized Booze Rejected

B.C. has no intention of following the example set by Ontario in providing mobile liquor outlets in remoter areas which attract vacationers.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson was asked Monday to comment on the recent announcement by the Ontario government and he said no thought has been given to such an experiment in this province.

He added: "But we'll give it the attention that it deserves."

When pressed by a reporter to elaborate on his stand, Peterson continued: "I'd say the answer is no. You may think it is advanced to have a mobile liquor store touring around delivering liquor like candy and ice cream — but I don't agree."

The way to look at a Mazda R100.

Under that hood is a new Mazda Rotary* engine. It's got more power per cc than any other automobile engine in the world.

Now put down the hood.

Get behind the wheel.

And go look for some legal competition. The standing ¼ mile? 18 seconds flat. Zero to sixty: 10.8 seconds. Ten seconds more you're doing 80. Easily. Ever so quietly.

Last year at the Nurburgring Touring Car Grand Prix, the little Mazda R100's placed fourth, fifth and sixth. There were 94 cars entered.

Look what Car & Driver said after road tests at Kent International Raceway: "The car itself is built like a watch – it is intricate and exotic and completely of its own personality. It's not trying to imitate ...it's a Mazda, confident that the world will know a good thing when it sees one."

Blush.

Look how it handles: "...delightfully tossable...you can fling it into a corner with abandon and it never gets out of hand." C&D said that too.

There are a dozen more sportscar features standard in every R100.

Maybe you should look into one at your dealer.

Oh yes, the Mazda R100 sells for $2699*. Isn't that what you've been looking for?

Not Guilty Plea

Fire Hearing Opens

Keith Alfred Shepherd, 29, of 558 Sumas, pleaded not guilty Monday to charges of intentionally setting a fire last August 6 in which an 82-year-old man died at 325 Michigan.

Shepherd is charged with arson and manslaughter in the death of Fred Dewhirst, of 325 Michigan.

He is being tried in B.C. Supreme Court before Mr. Justice Victor Dryer and a jury of eight men and four women.

Shepherd appeared in court on crutches. His trial had been scheduled earlier but was delayed when he suffered a broken foot in a car accident.

Defence lawyer J. J. Gow said the accused had been free on bail until the trial started.

Prosecutor Louis Lindholm, who is being assisted by Norman Prelypchan, told the jury Monday that the Victoria fire department was called to a fire at an old three-storey building at 325 Michigan about 2 a.m. Aug. 6.

"Before firemen arrive, Mr. Dewhirst crawled out a window, clung by his fingertips and then fell to the ground from the third floor," Lindholm said.

St. Joseph's Hospital pathologist Dr. Garth Walther testified that Dewhirst died from shock caused by multiple injuries including fractures to almost all his left ribs, damage to a lung and severe internal bleeding. He said the injuries were consistent with a fall from a height.

Donald Bacon, of 940 Delwood, Esquimalt, owner of the rooming house, testified that the building contained eight housekeeping rooms and a ground-floor apartment occupied by the caretaker and her five children.

The trial will continue at 10:30 a.m. today.

PROVINCIAL COURT

A 17-year-old Victorian was remanded in custody Monday in Victoria Provincial Court to May 20 for a pre-sentence report and sentence after pleading guilty to a 15-count charge.

The 15 counts in the charge read against Ronald James Mounsey, 2642 Shakespeare, included eight of breaking and entering and theft, four of attempted breaking and entering, and three of breaking and entering with intent to commit an indictable offence.

The counts named 14 businesses and one home in Victoria and mentioned six dates from Feb. 23 to last weekend.

A Victoria policeman told Judge William Ostler that a total of about $245 and some liquor was taken in the eight successful break-ins. Most of the money, $200 in special coins, was stolen at the one home while the rest was mainly small change taken from tills, drawers and a staff coffee fund.

□

Suspended sentences and one-year probationary terms were set by Ostler for three persons. The details, in order of appearance:

● Michael Ball, 17, of 2414 Mowat, pleaded guilty April 8 to a charge of uttering. The charge involved a cheque for $10 cashed Feb. 28 at a grocery in Oak Bay.

● Georgina Bonna Robinson, 19, of Duncan, pleaded guilty April 16 to a two-count Victoria charge of theft involving less than $50 — the shoplifting April 8 of clothing items worth a total of $42 from The Bay and T. Eaton Co.

● Mrs. Bernice Thomas, 19, of 358 Burnside West, pleaded guilty April 29 to a charge of theft involving more than $50 — the shoplifting April 15 of items worth a total of $57.69 from Woolco.

□

Harold Cecil Skinner, 53, address not known, was sent to jail for four months by Ostler. He pleaded guilty Friday to a charge of obtaining $49.91 worth of food and lodgings at the Empress Hotel in two days during April by fraud. On Monday he pleaded guilty to a charge of false pretences in obtaining clothing worth $46.47 April 1 from British Importers, 631 Yates, through a worthless cheque.

Lawrence William Crossman, 52, of 3316 Aldridge, was fined $250 after he was found guilty following a trial on a charge of theft involving less than $50 — shoplifting a 99-cent bottle of pills April 1 from The Bay.

Mrs. Lillian Barbara Dickson, 56, of 1028 Park Boulevard, was fined $200 after she was found guilty following a trial on a charge of theft involving less than $50 — shoplifting a few small items April 13 from the Safeway store, 1955 Foul Bay.

□

In traffic court, Judge E. F. N. Robinson ordered a $300 fine and one-month driving ban for Robert McVey, 54, of Cowichan Bay Road, who pleaded guilty to a charge of impaired driving April 20 in Victoria.

□

John Montgomery Walker, 55, of 3915 Scoulton, was fined $300 and given a partial three-month driving ban following his plea of guilty to a charge of driving April 17 in Victoria with a blood-alcohol reading of more than .08 per cent.

MIAMI (AP) — An underwater treasure hunting team returned to Miami Sunday after six weeks of salvaging 18th century shipwrecks off Haiti and announced their cargo of coins and cannon "only scratched the surface" of valuables that have lain untouched for 175 years.

Tim Watkins, vice-president of Marine Explorations Co. of Miami, showed off a 12-foot-long bronze cannon he claimed was the biggest brought into the United States.

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Pakistani troops and the paramilitary Indian border security forces exchanged fire Monday near the Indian village of Boyra on the border of rebellious East Pakistan, the Press Trust of India reported.

Flames Miss Dynamite

FORT ST. JOHN (CP) — Thirty-two forest fires, including a 200-acre blaze that came within 100 yards of touching off 70,000 pounds of dynamite, have been brought under control in the Peace River country in northern British Columbia.

The B.C. Forest service said the stubborn fire near Taylor, about 180 miles northeast of Prince George near the B.C.-Alberta border, was halted Sunday just short of a storehouse containing the explosives.

The largest fire in the district covers 3,500 acres of marketable timber in the Lone Prairie area, 40 miles southwest of Dawson Creek. Fire-fighting crews were hampered last week by winds of up to 50 miles an hour.

No forest fires were reported Monday on Vancouver Island.

Did You Ever See a Baldheaded Sheep?

While the fact that there are no baldheaded sheep may have no bearing on growth of human hair, it is from the wool of the sheep that the natural lanolin used in NIL-O-NAL is extracted.

Your hair needs natural scalp oils to keep it growing strong and thick. When you dry-out or wash-out those protective oils, you're inviting hair trouble—dandruff, itchy scalp, even falling hair! So why take chances? Replace those vital oils daily by using NIL-O-NAL (Lanolin spelled backwards).

B.C. Tel has a billion-dollar plan

Underground Cable is part of it.

The people of British Columbia frequently ask what B.C. Tel is doing to keep telephone wire and cable out of sight.

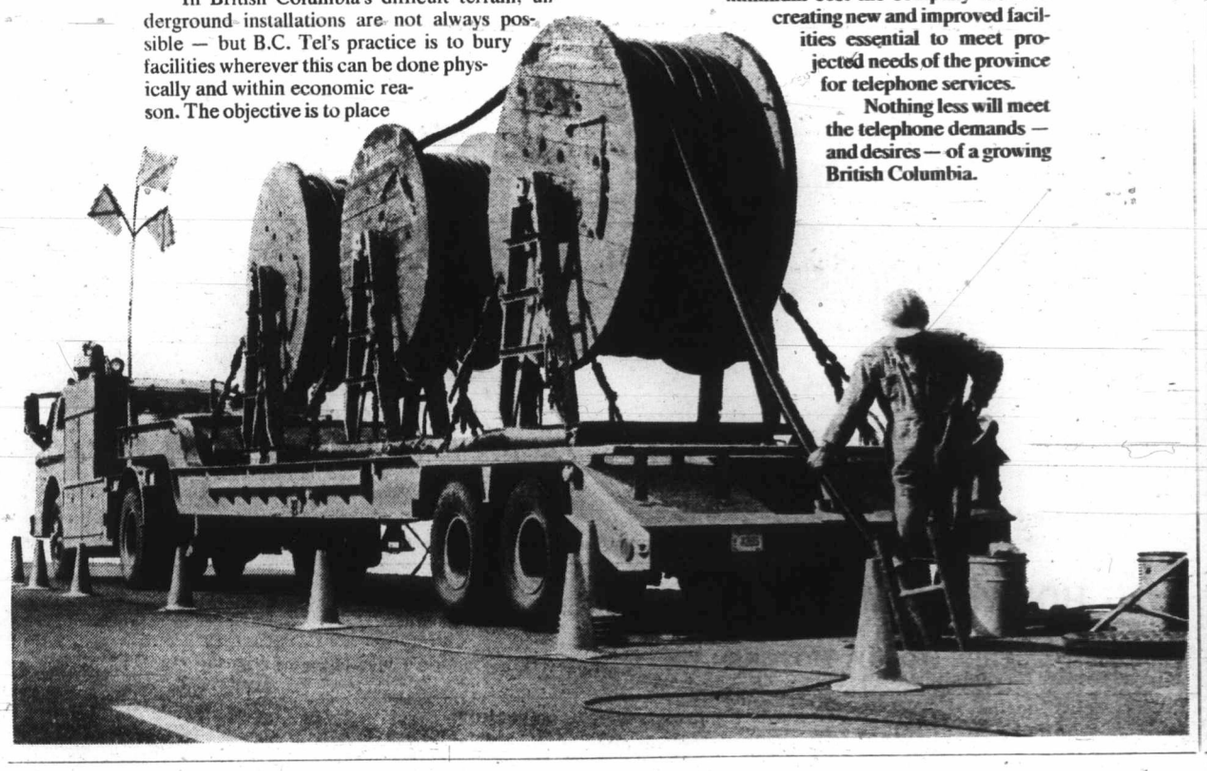

During 1970, the company's underground and buried cable installations cost more than $12 million. In 1971, such installations will cost $13.5 million — which represents about 60 per cent of the total cost of cable and wire additions required in this year's telephone network expansion. The percentage and dollar figures will increase each year in the future, with an anticipated outlay exceeding $50 million for underground installations during the coming three years.

In British Columbia's difficult terrain, underground installations are not always possible — but B.C. Tel's practice is to bury facilities wherever this can be done physically and within economic reason. The objective is to place new installations underground at the start and to go underground when replacing existing overhead plant as it wears out.

Progress is being made in an orderly way through a carefully co-ordinated over-all expansion program designed to meet the increasing telephone service demands of British Columbia's growing population — and to meet the desire of all of us for improved esthetic conditions — in the most economic fashion possible.

The total expansion program for the 1970s, underground installations included, is expressed as B.C. Tel's Billion-Dollar Plan because that is the minimum cost the company faces in creating new and improved facilities essential to meet projected needs of the province for telephone services.

Nothing less will meet the telephone demands — and desires — of a growing British Columbia.

ROYAL VISIT '71

Day Filled with Royal Sunshine

COMOX — It was a good day Monday . . . warm, sunny and filled with chattering children, fluttering flags and high excitement.

And residents of Comox Valley gathered in Courtenay early in the day in anticipation of seeing the royal family. Crowds lined the motorcade route hours before Queen Elizabeth, Prince Philip and Princess Anne were due.

The royal family arrived at CFB Comox at 6:15 p.m. and was met by Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell and Mrs. Campbell, base commander Col. Grant Nichols and Mrs. Nichols. Also presented to the queen were Courtenay Mayor George Hobson and Mrs. Hobson, Comox Mayor R. D. Ellis and Mrs. Ellis, Campbell River Mayor Ken Forde and Mrs. Forde and centennial committee chairmen Mrs. Myrtle Vickburg, Courtenay, and Dick Merrick, Comox.

When the queen stepped from the plane she was wearing a soft coat of coral shade with matching hat. She appeared fresh and relaxed and spent a few precious moments of the tight schedule stopping to speak to children in the crowd.

Crowds lined the streets along the motorcade route, cheering the royal visitors as they passed slowly by.

At the Comox jetty, navy cadets and Wrenettes formed the guard of honor as the royal party left its car to board the royal barge.

On the wharf, with the barge alongside, Royal Canadian Legion Branch No. 160 members formed another honor guard.

The queen stopped to talk to several of the veterans and was given four pictures by Peter Mellwood, a double amputee of the Second World War.

The queen told Mellwood she remembered being there, and said that it was one of the first functions she attended with her mother and father.

At this point Prince Philip spotted a pin on Mellwood's lapel . . . one worn by those who bail out safely from a plane. Philip explained the significance of the pin to Princess Anne, saying, "Once is enough." He told Mellwood that in the RAF the pin is worn on the tie.

Sandspit Ceremony

In this interview before the queen arrived on the windswept islands, Chief Weha (which he says is an Indian nickname given to him meaning big slave said his people were once 30,000 strong in the Queen Charlottes — healthy people who could swim across the inlets.

Today there are maybe 1,000 of them and they do not have the strength and health they once had.

This was the eighth and most travelled day of the hectic 10-day royal tour that is being held in conjunction with B.C.'s centennial celebrations.

It took the royal family 1,100 miles to Prince George, Prince Rupert, Sandspit and Comox. After a tour of Comox and Courtenay they set sail on the royal yacht Britannia for Victoria and today's functions there. On Wednesday they leave Vancouver International Airport for London.

Anne Happy

Princess Anne, who had missed two days of the tour because of a stomach upset, returned Sunday for a church service with her parents at Powell River and appeared both healthy and happy during Monday's gigantic game of hop-scotch.

At Prince George, a crowd estimated at more than 10,000 lined Fort George Park and it was here that Claudia refused to wear her nice white bonnet for the queen.

Claudia is a sad looking bassett hound who tossed off the bonnet that had been placed on her head just as the queen was approaching on a long walk through the park to meet the people.

'Brownie Capital'

At Fort George the queen must have thought she was looking at all the Brownies and Cubs in Canada. They were everywhere.

As one observer put it: "They say Prince George is the white spruce capital of the world, but after today I'm going to call it the Brownie capital of the world. When women are expecting babies here they put in an order for a Brownie."

The queen arrived in the sunlit park, smiling and waving, in a salmon pink ensemble, and her daughter in lime green.

It was a big moment for Shelly Olsen, 6, and her sister, Kelly, 5, who came 60 miles from Vanderhoof to stand in line two hours just for the opportunity to hand the queen a bouquet of yellow tulips.

Touching Moment

The queen carried them with her for most of the quarter of a mile walk.

Grace Chapell, an 11-year-old Prince George girl, gave a similar bouquet to Princess Anne.

But probably one of the touching moments of the Prince George visit was provided by 104-year-old Mrs. Christine Holland, who was brought 200 miles from Houston to present the queen with flowers and who — despite her age — stood ramrod straight under an enclosure alongside local dignitaries.

Mrs. Holland is a member of the Carrier Indian Band who still does her own housework and goes for walks.

There is always a certan sadness to such visits and it belongs to those who are seldom thought of — the children who never get a glimpse of the queen.

View Blocked

Such a youngster in Prince George was Ricky Yargeau, 6, who waited three hours for the royal family only to have adults get in his way at the last minute and block his view.

"I don't think he feels very good about it," said his sister, Sandra, 11. But she had other problems to think of.

She had just lost her sister Brenda, 9, in the crowd.

During their stop at Prince Rupert the royal family had two boat rides — one on the ferry from Digby Island to the city of Prince Rupert and the other on a seiner named the Signal. On both occasions Prince Philip, an old naval hand, spent his time aboard on the bridge. He was joined there on the ferry by his wife and daughter.

Cake Cut

At the Prince Rupert courthouse they listened to the Raindrops Choir, children dressed in colorful plastic raincoats and carrying umbrellas. It was here that Princess Anne cut a centennial cake with a ceremonial naval sword, something that prompted Prince Philip to make thrusts with an imaginary sword.

But the day, in a sense, belonged to Sandspit where the temperature was 48 and the wind swept in from the Pacific at 45 miles an hour.

They were waiting there, a rather small knot of them, on Moresby Island, where the population is about 400 and is make up mainly of men working at the Crown Zellerbach logging operation.

Many of those awaiting the arrival of the royal visitors were Indians, though, and would have come from Graham Island to the north.

It isn't every day that strangers, especially women, drop into their midst and it's easy enough to mistake someone else for the queen.

"There she is now," a child shouted gleefully.

"Is she the queen?" asked another.

The queen in this case turned out to be Maryse Richer from Radio Canada in Montreal, who had just stepped off the press plane.

A few minutes later Maryse was roundly toasted at the bar down the road and respectfully called "Your Majesty" as a sort of continuing joke while everyone waited for the Queen's aircraft to arrive.

This bar in itself sort of tells the story of life in the semi-wilderness.

Not Accurate

Officially it is the Sandspit Islander Hotel, but some call it the only bar in town. Which isn't exactly accurate. Not because there's another bar on this particular island. There isn't. But neither is there a town.

They open the bar whenever there's business. When the boys come in from the bush, or when a plane lands for some reason or other and dumps 40 to 60 thirsty people on the spit.

That was the way it was Monday. And soon some of the local folk were in there too, listening with interest while the strange queen was being toasted.

Some of them allowed as to how they might wander the half-mile to the airport to see the queen. And others said it might be just as much fun to remain in the only bar in town.

Dancers Thanked

In the end all of them — the sportsmen and the two-fisted gamblers —head down to see the queen.

The queen thanks the dancers and tells them how colorful their performance was. She stands on plain grass and dandelions because no one has bothered to put down the customary red carpet.

And that is why the fallen dancer in the bright red robe stands out so well.

You can spend less than last time for your new car... without giving up a thing!

Let's say you're now driving a big, full-size car, 3 or 4 years old. And you're ready to trade on a new '71. Well, you know before you see a dealer that prices haven't stood still.

But, let's get one thing straight, the full-size Pontiac you buy today has had a lot of new features added.

However, we said you can spend less. Think intermediate. Trim-size!

We don't know what kind of big car you own but it's a good bet a trim '71 LeMans has almost as much headroom.

And maybe even more legroom.

Give up comfort? No way.

As for performance, a LeMans has a 250-cubic-inch standard Six that's all business when it comes to moving.

If it takes a V8 to move you, you have up to five big ones on the option list. Even a 455 cubic incher!

And all Pontiac engines operate efficiently on regular or the new no-lead or low-lead gasolines. Besides the lower exhaust emissions attainable with this engine/fuel combination, there are benefits in longer life for your spark plugs, exhaust system and other engine parts.

Give up performance? Not in a Wide-Track Pontiac LeMans. So we've cleaned up that matter.

How about all the extra-value things LeMans has for you that just weren't around back in '67 or '68.

Like fiberglass panelling that resists dings and dents and won't ever rust? It surrounds the grille and headlamps.

How about steel Side-guard beams in all doors and a protective Cargo-guard bulkhead in the trunk?

Not to mention Pontiac's windshield-embedded antenna that's yours when you order a radio.

There are thirteen trim-size models in Pontiac's intermediate lineup.

So let your Pontiac dealer ease you into a new '71 today. The only thing you'll be giving up is your old car.

Centre: LeMans Sport Convertible;

Victoria Sharing Renewal Funds

Victoria will definitely get some of the $3.5 million federal urban renewal money allocated to B.C., Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock was told Monday.

Haddock told the Colonist he got the message in a phone call from Public Works Minister William Chant following a Monday meeting of the provincial cabinet.

"We won't know how much," said Haddock, "until Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell makes a formal announcement, but he's out of town." Campbell is in his home riding of Comox for the royal tour.

"I don't like to jump the gun," said Haddock, "until we know just what this will amount to in dollars but our priorities are clear. We must move to buy the Ocean Cement property on Wharf Street and move fast on waterfront development."

The mayor explained, "All the funds were to have gone to Vancouver but I think we were able to convince the provincial government that we had a very viable and active proposal.

"Right now I'm on edge hoping the federal government has allocated more than the original $3.5 million. We could use $2.5 million for our plans," said Haddock.

Campbell met in March with a number of civic officials and local businessmen to discuss plans for the Inner Harbor and to coordinate their efforts.

Following that meeting Campbell said he would have "a pretty fair indication by the first of May" if anything could be done to provide funds for Inner Harbor renewal.

Vancouver had made a strong bid for urban renewal funds to build a community recreation complex and to renovate 1,000 old houses. Campbell indicated in March that unless Vancouver had its plans complete by April 30, then funds allocated for Vancouver would be used in Victoria.

Vancouver did complete its plans but indications Monday were that there would still be funds for use in Victoria.

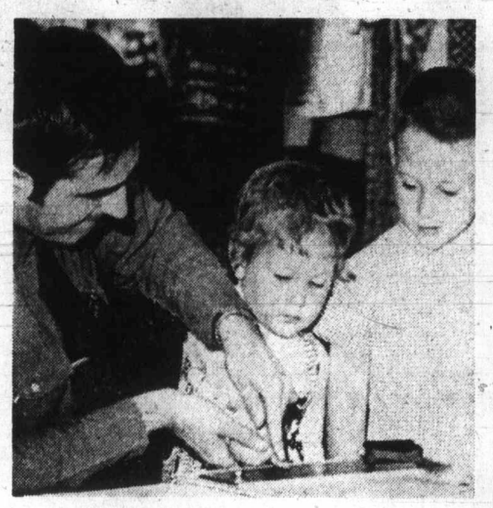

An influx of urban renewal funds could trigger major developments by private investors around the Inner Harbor that would complement civic activity.

Marathon Realty, a division of Canadian Pacific Investments, has said the company is ready to proceed with $1 million in redeveloping its waterfront property on Belleville Street.

Two developers, the Reid and Nordal groups, have also indicated strong interest in building in the area.

Reports prepared on the feasibility of Inner Harbor development for the city suggest that civic initiative in development of the area would generate about $27 million in private investment.

"It just remains to be seen," said Haddock, "how much we can get, for only then will we be able to determine just how far we can go."

Saanich Police Hailed by Curtis

It's a very unusual week, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said Monday, when he doesn't receive at least one compliment about the municipal police department — and it's also "a very rare occasion" when he hears criticism of a department member.

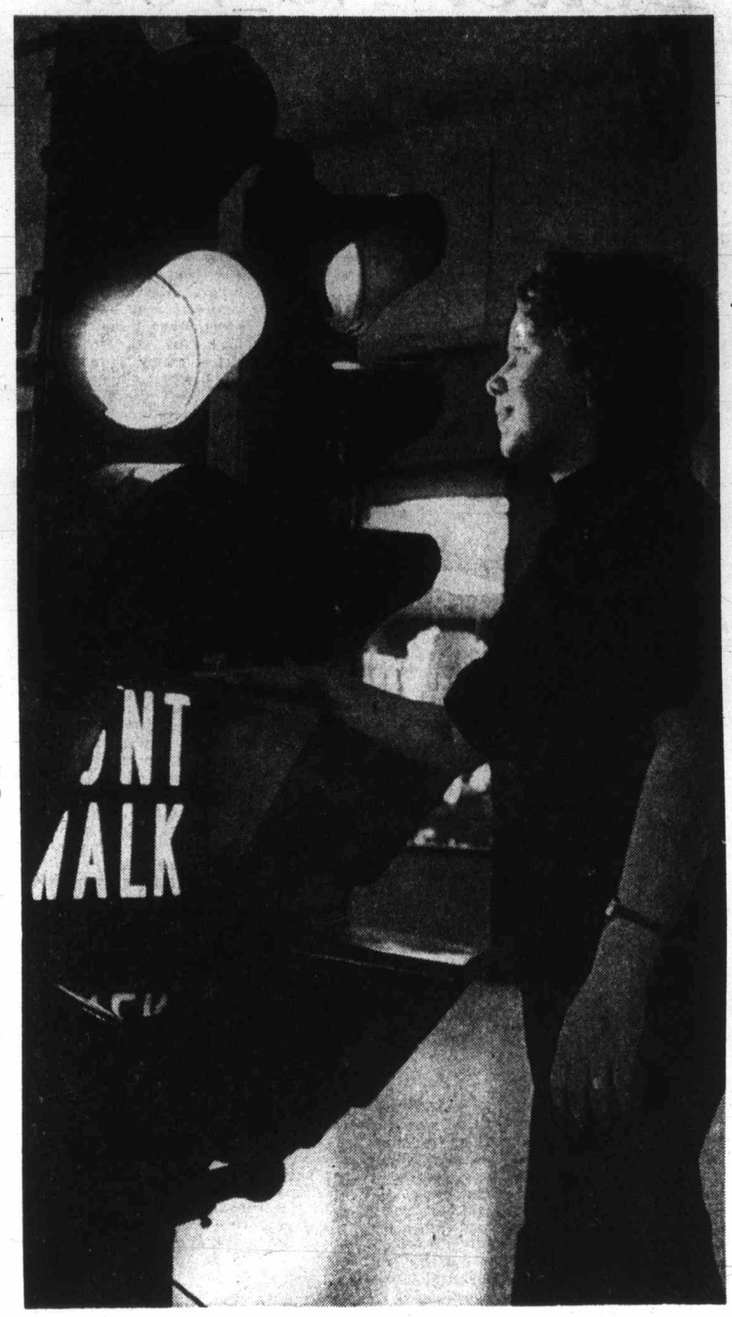

That point was one of several made by Curtis, also chairman of the Saanich police commission, as he opened the department's big Canadian Police Week display in Hillside shopping centre. He also said:

- It is "a sad fact of life today" that years of dedicated and imaginative community relations work by local police departments "can be obliterated in a matter of hours" by incidents involving police elsewhere in North America.

And so, he added, "it is more important than ever before that police departments and their individual members make every possible effort to engage in direct communications with the people they live among and serve."

- He described the Saanich force as enjoying the reputation of being "one of the finest" of its kind in Canada and said this part of Canada and North America is "extremely fortunate" in the kind of man who becomes a policeman.
- He related the "startling" growth of the Saanich force from 1906 until now which had "merely kept pace with the increased population . . . and there is no doubt that our chief constable could use additional manpower under certain circumstances."

The police display will continue from 9:30 a.m. each day through this week, closing at 5:30 p.m. today, 5 p.m. Saturday and 9 p.m. other days. In addition, there will be public tours Saturday and Sunday of the public safety building at 760 Vernon.

Committee Study

Only Voters Approve Ice Surface

Recommendation Monday of an ice surface as the indoor recreational facility for Saanich's Cedar Hill area did not sit too well with two non-voting members of a committee set up to study the matter.

Voting members of the committee — Ald. Leslie Passmore, Ald. William Campbell and chairman Ald. Alan Newberry — all voted for the recommendation which now goes to council.

Ald. William Noel, who had to leave Monday's meeting early, said he was in favor of an ice surface.

The committee also recommended that the firm of Peterson & Lester be appointed architects for the new facility.

Mrs. Louise Mason, 3409 Browning, said she would prefer a community centre to an ice surface. She said she would be in favor of it being built in the southern end of Cedar Hill Park.

N. R. Zapf, 3833 Cumberland, said he did not see any point in coming to the meeting if members were not given an opportunity to study the suggestions put forward by various groups.

He wasn't necessarily against an ice surface, he said, but would have liked time to consider the submissions. "But we have no vote anyway," he added.

The two other non-voting members of the committee — Lyn Crawford, 1651 McKenzie, and G. H. Emery, 1250 Judge Place — did not attend the meeting. Chairman Newberry said they had been invited.

Mayor Hugh Curtis, who attended the meeting although he is not a member of the study committee, said he favored a community centre.

Submissions were read to the meeting from Saanich Minor Hockey Association, Greater Victoria Lawn Bowling Association, Victoria and District Amateur Basketball Association.

An imaginative suggestion for a community centre, complete with floor plan and artist's conception of the building, was received from Joseph Barber-Starkey, 1232 Judge Place.

Zapf brought to the meeting with him a proposal from Reynolds junior high school for a visual and performing arts centre attached to the school.

Saanich recreation manager William Young told the meeting there was "a real demand in the municipality for a large floor area for cultural and social events."

The committee was set up in February to recommend what type of building will be erected in the Cedar Hill area and what it will be used for.

The building, to be completed before the end of next year under a budget of $260,000, will be the fourth and last provided for by the 1967 indoor recreation bylaw.

But Sewer Issue Deferred

Broadmead Rated As Development

At a special meeting Monday night, Saanich council voted to declare Broadmead a development area as outlined in a master land-use plan submitted to council and subject to recent amendments to the B.C. Municipal Act.

But a request from the development company for council to extend a sewer system to service Broadmead, the old Rithet farm at Royal Oak, was referred to the public works committee.

A report from Municipal Engineer Neville Life indicated that extending the sewers would require the finding of $1.3 million for construction and acceptance by property owners of an increase of about $7 in parcel tax. He stressed that those costs were based on general figures on possible subdivisions and didn't include regional trunk or maintenance costs.

Fred Russell, a director of the development company, referred to two closed meetings which council had already held to discuss the possible extension of the sewered area and said his company was anxious to know as soon as possible what was involved in getting sewers.

He told council that houses already built had sewer connections but also had to put in septic tanks.

"We're finding ourselves strait-jacketed," he said. "Because of the state of percolation, we have to make larger lots and this requires more expensive houses."

The company started seven years ago on the development, Russell said, "and we've got to get some answers. It's the moment of truth as far as we're concerned."

The master plan submitted to council covers about 700 acres and calls for single-family dwellings, multiple housing, parks, schools, community and commercial development.

The plan brochure points out that the variety of housing will permit the natural combining of population of all ages. The Hudson's Bay Company, it says, has purchased a majority interest in the 33.25 acres reserved for commercial development and Broadmead plans the first phase of the shopping area to be started in 1973.

Independents

Members Soar Past 200

Membership in the Victoria branch of the Committee for an Independent Canada has increased from 25 to more than 200 in less than a month, a spokesman for the group said Monday.

Norm Ruff said that a second meeting of the group, held Monday night at the student union building of the University of Victoria, attracted more than 100 people, more than three times the number attracted by the first meeting held last month.

From this, he said, a committee of 30 people was elected to organize work groups to start such projects as panel discussions, educational talks and petition-signing for an independent Canada.

Ruff said the petition-signing was the most important project because it was part of a nation-wide effort. The national organization hoped to present Prime Minister Trudeau with signatures early next month, Ruff said, and it was hoped to obtain 10,000 signatures from the Victoria area.

Decision Next Monday

School Board May Halt Teacher Dues Checkoff

It's time the Greater Victoria school board stopped collecting dues for the B.C. Teacher's Federation, according to school trustee Peter Bunn.

His motion Monday night to the education committee of the board that the district discontinue automatic checkoff of federation dues will come before the board for a decision next Monday.

"I feel we should re-assess this BCTF situation in the light of the teacher's strike earlier this year, which I personally found a rather irresponsible action," said Bunn.

"I feel that the federation should go it alone now.

"If teachers believe in the association then each member should be responsible for supporting it with direct payments rather than the school board making automatic deductions."

Trustee Victor Rogers pointed out that if the board continues to make deductions, then it would be in a position to know which teachers belong to the federation, and which don't.

"I don't believe this is any of our business," said Rogers.

The provincial government enacted legislation during the session under which membership in the federation ceased to be a condition of employment for teachers, thus ending a "closed-shop" situation for the federation, and making membership of teachers voluntary.

Board chairman Allan McKinnon, himself a teacher, said he felt a change in present policy could be interpreted by teachers as being an antagonistic move on the part of the board.

He said the federation did a tremendous amount of professional up-grading work among teachers with in-service training programs.

But, he said, if all school districts followed a Victoria move, then the federation could end up with just hard-core militant unionist membership, without the professional training aspects.

"It would just be spiteful to stop co-operating," he said.

Trustees Carron Jameson, Philip Ney and Walter Donald agreed with ending the checkoffs, and Harold Knight wanted the checkoffs to remain.

Final decision will come next Monday.

Curtain Held For Drive-By

The Victoria Theatre Guild's production of Cactus Flower, originally scheduled to begin at 8:15 p.m. tonight at Langham Court Theatre has been postponed until 8:30 p.m.

A Guild spokesman said the move was being taken to facilitate traffic on Rockland Avenue as the queen will be passing through the area on the way to Government House at 8 p.m.

Bennetts Join Royal Cruise

A surprise trip aboard the royal yacht Britannia was made by Premier Bennett and Mrs. Bennett overnight Monday.

The premier's office said Monday the Bennetts joined the royal family aboard the Britannia at Comox Monday night for a cruise through the Gulf Islands early today before arriving in Victoria shortly after 3 p.m.

Trustees Wrestle 'Yeah'-to-'Ney' List of Objectives

First there was the "yeah" list—and it looked as if Greater Victoria school board trustees were actually going to agree on a list of objectives.

But then came the "Ney" list, and though it had been cut to three, it was enough to cause tabling of the issue for an undefined length of time.

Trustees have been haggling over the proposed board objectives since the first meeting of the year, and had finally referred some 50 suggestions to a small committee to whittle down.

Monday night at the education committee, a short list of 11 objectives was presented for trustee approval and discussion — and additions.

The list included:

- Exploring methods of lowering the pupil-adult ratio in schools.
- Broadening the school athletic program.
- Striving for earlier recognition of learning difficulties.
- Providing opportunities for all students, regardless of age, to obtain 12 years of education without fees.

Turstee Philip Ney objected to the method by which the original trustee suggestions had been whittled down to those which could be started this year.

He was particularly insistent about the need to introduce a foreign language in kindergarten — not, he said, to teach it, but to expose children to another language.

Trustee Victor Rogers objected, saying the subject had been discussed in committee and turned down.

But trustee Daphne Temple came to Ney's rescue, saying this had also been one of her suggestions.

Ney also wanted to see implementation of removal of grade distinctions after Grade 7.

"You might say there's the yeah list and the Ney list," interjected trustee Peter Bunn.

Building Site Hit by Fire

Fire Monday night destroyed one workshed, damaged another shed, a trailer and a pickup truck on the construction site for the new Victoria Press building in the 2600 block Douglas. Victoria fire department officials said the cause of the fire is still under investigation and the amount of damage had not been estimated.

Success 'Fair'

"Reasonably successful" was the term applied to the Boy Scout bag drive Saturday to collect reusable and repairable items for Goodwill Enterprises.

Galbraith:

Better No Vow Than No Brain

LONDON (UPI) — American economist John Kenneth Galbraith defended Women's Lib Monday and said his suggestion that bright girls should "live in sin" rather than marry less intelligent men infuriated Radcliffe college trustees.

"Some of my best friends are pioneer members," Galbraith said in an interview with the Times of London.

Galbraith, former U.S. ambassador to India and now a fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, England, said his view on Women's Lib got him into trouble when he was a Radcliffe trustee in the early 1950s.

"My fellow trustees, mostly women, were anything but militant," he said. "Most of them were ancient, aggressive and prejudiced. They believed a girl should marry, procreate and have a nice home. When I said I did not think it necessary for a bright girl to marry — rather than lose her brains she should live in sin — I was the object of their concentrated fury. And if you have never been attacked by a pack of angry Boston matrons, you don't know what trouble really is," Galbraith said.

'Equally Bad'

He said Harvard University, where he holds a chair of economics, "was equally bad" in discriminating against women teachers.

"Eventually at my prodding, the economics department did hire a Radcliffe girl for a teaching post," Galbraith said.

"The chairman told her that my colleagues really didn't want a women teacher — and that they had been bludgeoned by Galbraith into appointing her.

"She was no hero and burst into tears and came to tell me she wouldn't take the job. The next one I picked was not only tougher but better looking. She stayed," he said.

Bright Girls

Galbraith said at times he had done his best to dissuade "bright girls" from marrying less intelligent men by telling them: "Better have an affair. It isn't so permanent and you keep your job."

"So often in the States I've seen a first-class woman scholar fall in love with a man who has half her brains" Galbraith said. "He takes her off to Gallup, N.M., or Peoria, Ill. In effect he drags her down to his level of intellectual incompetence.

"It is very hard for women to do well in business, not because they are unfitted for it but because there is a secret and invisible barrier — the male world of luncheon clubs, golf, locker rooms and peculiar jokes, in which they do not participate and where so much business wheeling and dealing is done," he said.

Mens Work

Galbraith said the view that women are more suitable than men for minding children is "nonsense . . . propagated by men who surrogate the responsibility because they do not want it themselves."

Galbraith acknowledged that his own 33-year marriage "is not absolutely equal."

He said his wife Catherine has had "far more responsibility" for their three children, all boys, "than I have."

"But that is as it should be," he added. "I am a better writer than she is."

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: May I say a word to the teenager who was so miserable because her feet were too big?

Little does she know, I am a girl of medium height and I also wear a size-nine shoe. I am the luckiest one in our family. My three brothers have an orthopedic disease called Charcot-Marie-Tooth Atrophy. Each has had a series of operations to correct this problem and they all have spent several summer vacations in the hospital. Your advice couldn't have been better. (You told "Size Nine" to go visit an orthopedic hospital or a home for crippled children.)

When I first visited my brothers in the hospital, I realized how fortunate I was. I saw children there with no feet — and no legs.

Today the styles are so clunky I have no trouble finding fashionable shoes that fit. Furthermore, most girls have big feet today because they go barefoot a lot. So, please tell your readers that big feet are the rule rather than the exception these days, and nothing to be ashamed of. Look at the model Verushka. She wears a size twelve and she's a great beauty. —Shoe On A Different Foot.

Dear Shoe: Verushka isn't the only one. Read on:

Dear Ann Landers: When I read the letter from the girl who wrote to bewail her size-nine feet I hurried to my bookshelf and hunted up a book about one of the most imitated women in the world. I found the picture I was looking for with the inscription on her photograph: Here it is: "Highlight of the trip for newsmen came when Jacqueline removed her shoes to enter a temple. Her shoe size, until then a mystery, was at last revealed. It was 9½."

I wouldn't say it handicapped her much. Would you?—M.S.H., Marysville, Pa.

Dear M.S.H.: No. In fact, the purpose of feet is to get you where you want to go, and I would say Jackie's size 9½ has served her well.

□

Dear Ann Landers: I have been married to a military man for 14 years. Two years ago Jack was in Vietnam for an 11-month tour of duty. During that period I was both father and mother to our three children, and pregnant with the fourth. I worried myself sick the whole time Jack was gone.

Three months ago I learned from a friend whose husband served with mine that both men were involved with a couple of Army nurses the entire time they were overseas.

When I first asked about it he denied everything. Later he admitted it was true. The more we talked the more he defended himself. Now he insists he did nothing wrong that I was 10,000 miles away and he was lonesome. I reminded him that the distance was the same for me as it was for him but I had managed to behave myself. I am so upset I won't let him near me. I need a woman who will take my side and make him see how wrong it was. We fight constantly about the low-down, rotten way he carried on when he was out of my sight. Please help.—Infantryman's Wife.

Dear Wife: War is hell, and a husband doesn't need any more hell when he gets home. Forget about what happend over there and thank God he came home. I'm not recommending the guy for a good conduct medal, but I can understand how and why he got off the track. My advice is to stop haranguing your husband and start acting like a wife or he might start looking for another nurse.

Little Daughter Decapitated

NEW YORK (UPI) — A young housewife was found Sunday "singing songs and quoting the Bible," after the head of her five-year-old daughter had been severed, police said.

Mrs. Judith Kolo, 29, was charged with murder for the decapitation of Jennifer, her daughter by a previous marriage. Police said a knife was used. The Kolos have a four-month-old child.

Theodore Kolo returned home Sunday afternoon and found his wife and the body of the child in the dining room, police said. He summoned police.

When officers arrived, they said they found Mrs. Kolo was "singing songs and quoting the Bible." She was admitted to Elmhurst General Hospital for observation following arraignment on the murder charge.

ERMA BOMBECK

Youth Knows Where It's At,

I peeked into my son's bedroom a few weeks ago and found him sprawled on the floor with a pencil and notebook. "How are you going to observe Earth Week?" he asked.

"Gee, I don't know," I said. "Maybe the same way I observe Jackie and Ari's wedding day . . . by shaving my legs."

"I'm serious," he charged. "Do you know what is the greatest threat to man's environment?"

"This bedroom," I said, looking around in disbelief.

"People," he amended. "They're careless. I am writing a paper on ways we can help."

"Where do you keep your bed?" I asked, bustling around.

"In the middle of the floor," he said. "It isn't made because I am airing it."

"You've been airing it for three years," I said. "Why have you been sleeping with 48 copies of Sports Illustrated, a Dixie cup, a hubcap, and 18 mismated socks?"

"Ecology is a personal thing," he mused. "It has to start with one person at a time. Every candy wrapper is important. Every bottle cap."

"Why are my eyes watering?" I gasped.

"It's the aquarium," he said. "The catfish just isn't doing his job."

I looked at the polluted bowl of water with the pump that gasped and gurgled. Other than the Cuyahoga River in Cleveland, it was possibly the only body of water that caught fire.

"Carelessness," he continued, "I think that's what it is all about. If you could just make people aware of how they are cluttering up our countryside."

"Are you saving these soft drink bottles for anything?" I asked.

"There's a garter snake in one of them," he said offhand. "Now, where was I? Oh yes, clutter. How about, 'We must all band together and form groups to bring pressure against the Earth Molesters.' How's that?"

"Wonderful," I said. "Did you know you have gym shoes under your bed that have rusted? A three years' supply of crumpled nose tissue in your sock drawer? A piece of green bread under your pillow? A pre-schooler under the clothes on your chair? A nest in your toothbrush and towel on the floor of your closet that just spoke to me?"

"Mom," he sighed, "If you aren't going to help me with this paper on ecology, then quit mumbling."

I stood at the door and watched a garter snake slither over a mound of dirty underwear, and wondered what you'd get if you recycled kids.

Liberation Rally Taxes Speakers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Speakers had to shout their messages without electronic assistance at a Women's Liberation rally held in Vancouver's Stanley Park Sunday.

Police ordered the women to shut off their loudspeaker system after receiving a complaint from an unidentified citizen.

About 250 persons — including a number of young couples — sat on the grass in warm sunshine as they listened to a program covering such topics as Mother's Day, abortion and equal pay.

A few women in the audience shouted at two city policemen who ordered organizers to shut off the loudspeaker system, but the protest was mainly quiet.

The group had applied for a permit to hold a gathering with loudspeakers but was only granted permission for a gathering.

Abortion Motion Fully Supported

Victoria Council of Women voted unanimous support Monday for a proposed national council resolution asking removal of abortion from the Criminal Code of Canada.

The resolution, passed with comments of, "We don't want more unwanted babies to be born," will be discussed May 31 to June 2 at the National Council of Women annual meeting in Halifax. The Victoria council does not expect to send any delegates because of the distance and expense.

Resolutions already accepted by the national resolutions committee include requests for uniform highway traffic regulations.

- Elimination of undesirable films and documentaries from CBC network and time restrictions of films unsuitable for children.
- Employment camps for youth.
- Hostels for travelling youth.
- Adoption of the metric system in Canada.
- Request for a national Prairie park in southern Saskatchewan.

The council will also be seeking crown land at the mouth of the Capilano River in West Vancouver to be reserved for park purposes to enhance the entrance to Vancouver harbor.

Canadian Guidebook Written

The Law and Women

TORONTO (CP) — A guidebook for women on laws affecting them has been written by Marvin Zuker and June Callwood.

As the introduction stresses, it is a guide to the major points of law governing abortion, divorce, marriage, working conditions, dying, the rights of female minors.

It indicates where there are exceptions to the laws, but it is not an in-depth study, nor intended to be a substitute for professional advice in complex legal situations.

The book does list places where information on abortion is available. It lists civil liberties associations or their equivalents, and provides a sample marriage separation agreement. It suggests where to turn for advice on other problems in several chapters.

It is written clearly, in an easy, non-technical style. In several instances the authors' attitudes come through loud and clear when they apparently disapprove of a law. For instance, the marriage certificate "embodies the traditional interpretation of a wife's role; in return for financial considerations, she becomes part janitor, part breeder, part prostitute."

Zuker is a lawyer, author of other works on the law, and a lecturer at Centennial College, Scarborough, Ont.

Miss Callwood is a writer, vice-president of the Canadian Civil Liberties Association and a founder of Digger House, an aid station for "street" youngsters.

Buckingham Palace Tours Could Boost Royal Coffers

LONDON (UPI) — The London Daily Mirror suggested Monday Queen Elizabeth should permit guided tours through Buckingham Palace because it would add $2.4 million a year to the national treasury.

In an article on ways of supporting a proposed royal pay raise, the Mirror said, "What a good idea it would be to allow tourists to see the Throne Room or the Buckingham Palace ballroom."

Noting that more than 1.5 million visitors file through the White House in Washington each year, the newspaper said no one has suggested the queen imitate former American first lady Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis and lead many of the tours.

"As long as it could be done properly, I think it would be the natural trend," said Lord Montagu, who has opened his estate to 500,000 annual visitors.

"If all the problems — security, staffing and things like that — could be overcome, I think it would be a tremendous draw," he said.

The Mirror said the tourists to the Montagu estate bring in about $480,000 a year to the Montagu coffers.

"If Lord Montagu's turnover is a quarter of a million pounds, the queen's could reach at least a million — without trying," the paper said.

New Energy Find May Aid Babies

BALTIMORE (AP) — A previously unknown source of energy for newborn babies is reported to have been discovered by a University of Maryland medical researcher.

Dr. Tyson Tildon, the director of pediatric research at the university's medical school, claims the newly-found energy supply — ketone bodies — may play an important role in conditions such as malnutrition and mental retardation in infants.

Tildon, a biochemist, says that the ketone bodies—acid substances previously thought to be body wastes — appear to be an energy source for about the first six months of life.

Until now, he adds, glucose, or body sugar, was thought to be the body's main energy source.

After six months, the use of ketones as an energy source seems to disappear, Tildon says. He speculates that the baby probably needs the two sources to ensure proper growth of the brain and central nervous system.

Tildon says that, although babies are expected to have glucose levels in the bloodstream comparable to those found in adults, the levels in some infants are one-fifth or one-tenth the normal level.

These infants "show no signs of difficulty," the doctor says, noting that an adult with such a low glucose probably would go into convulsions.

Mother Discovers Boxes of Rattlers

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — A mother-of-two found five boxes of live rattlesnakes in a dilapidated warehouse Saturday where neighborhood children played.

Mrs. Jeanne Blum and her daughter Debbie, 16, made the discovery after going to the abandoned building to chase away children who were playing inside.

No one was bitten by the snakes, whose poison can be fatal, but Mrs. Blum said she "just froze" in fright when Debbie lifted the lid on one of the boxes to discover a horde of hissing rattlers.

Police called in the Essex County Humane Society which took away the snakes. Ownership of the reptiles was traced to Gary Logan, who recently moved to Windsor a few months ago with a collection of 150 timber rattlers, western diamondbacks and copperheads up to six feet long.

It was not immediately clear how the boxes of snakes got in the warehouse. A police spokesman said that "there was no law on the books" regarding the keeping of rattlesnakes.

Students 'Double-Crossed'

Curtis Lashes Out at Ottawa

The federal government has "double-crossed" tens of thousands of Canadian students by its mismanagement of the Opportunities for Youth program, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis charged Monday.

Curtis was commenting, in an interview, on reports that there was almost no chance that applications by Saanich, Victoria, Oak Bay and other municipalities for program funds would be granted.

The $15.8 million program was designed to provide jobs for students during the summer months and applications for funds have been sought from municipalities, private organizations and youth-run agencies.

Reports have been circulating for a week that few civic programs would be approved and that most of those getting funds would be those from small innovative private groups.

Official decisions have not yet been made on Victoria, Saanich and Oak Bay projects, but Ottawa reports indicate most civic applications were being turned down because they don't provide new services and don't involve youth in the administration and planning.

The strict adherence to those originally roughly-laid-out criteria was necessary because the department of the secretary of state handling the applications had been overwhelmed with requests for the money, according to Ottawa reports.

Curtis Monday accused the secretary of state's department of "unbelievable mismanagement" in the administration of the fund.

If they did not realize when they advertised the program how many applications there would be, it was clear "they simply have no idea of the size of the problem" of youth unemployment, he said.

He noted that two applications he had been involved in submitting — that of Saanich and that of the Captial Regional Board which is not expected to be granted either — had both been submitted according to official rules and on official forms, and complied with the conditions the federal government had laid down.

The sudden emphasis in the last two weeks on criteria which previously had been only roughly laid out amounted to a change in the ground rules of the program, he said, which had "probably dashed the hopes of tens of thousands of students across the country."

He suggested the whole plan might have been "an unforgiveable political ploy" on the part of the government to show, in mid-winter, how much they were doing for students.

He described himself as "extremely annoyed" by the government's handling of the whole plan "not because the municipality has lost out, but because of the cynicism of the federal government in announcing the plan, then being overwhelmed by the response."

"It should be a long time before Canadian students forgive and forget this double-cross by the government," Curtis said.

City of Victoria officials last week said they had learned unofficially that Victoria's grant application would not be approved.

UVic Archaeology Students

Old Fort Site Sifted For Native Traces

Archaeologists digging at Fort Rodd Hill hope to discover how Indians once used the 44-acre site which is now a national historic park.

About 12 fourth-year University of Victoria students completing laboratory requirements for an archaeology course have been digging since February, uncovering tiny bone and stone artifacts.

Jack Rippengale, park superintendent, said the digs are situated on an ancient midden just up from the high tide mark on the east side of the park.

Rippengale said anthropologists suspect that the site may have once been a large Indian encampment because it has a good water supply, a natural defensive position and a sheltered bay.

He said an Indian grave and a stone hollowed out that might have been used for grinding were found on the property previously, but not near the recent digs.

One of the students at the site is Lt.Cmdr. Geoff Hilliard, officer in charge of visits and projects at the Esquimalt base, and a former skipper of the Oriole.

He said the digs were being conducted under the supervision of Donald Mitchell, associate professor of sociology and anthropology at UVic.

Hilliard said they have started five small excavations each measuring about seven feet square and about 3½ feet deep. He said the digging is so slow because the soil has to be taken out by a hand trowel and carefully sifted.

He said the findings are encouraging, and everything found has been expected by the diggers. This stage of the digging will continue until about July.

Mitchell said the material uncovered is at least 250 years old, before the Indians came into contact with the white man. He said the material could be as old as 1,000 years old.

Programs Popular, Financing Problem

There has been an increase in the number of private and government organizations wishing to set up community programs in the Victoria area, Esquimalt council was told Monday night.

Community council president Harold Moist had reported to a committee meeting on the growth in the number of private agencies wishing to set up programs at a time when financing was an increasing problem.

He said that in addition to the private agencies, the federal government through various departments was funding innovative programs without either informing or consulting recognized government or non-government groups within the community.

These programs had no guidelines for evaluation or assurance of continued funds.

It was decided to write to the federal departments, expressing concern about the programs, and it was also decided to prepare a resolution on the subject for submission to the Union of B.C. Municipalities.

In other business, council gave first reading to a series of bylaws setting the municipal budget and mill rate.

Provision is made for a $2,197,000 budget, and a 35.51 mill rate.

Renton Youth Charged

SEATTLE (AP) — Gary Gene Grant, 19, of Renton, was charged Monday with four counts of first-degree murder, including the deaths of two Renton boys last April 20.

Charges placed earlier against John Arthur Chance, 40, were dismissed. Chance had pleaded innocent to the deaths of the six-year-old boys.

Grant's other charges were in connection with the deaths of Joanne Marie Zulauf, 17, of Sept. 22, 1970, and Carol Adele Erickson, 19, on Dec. 16, 1969.

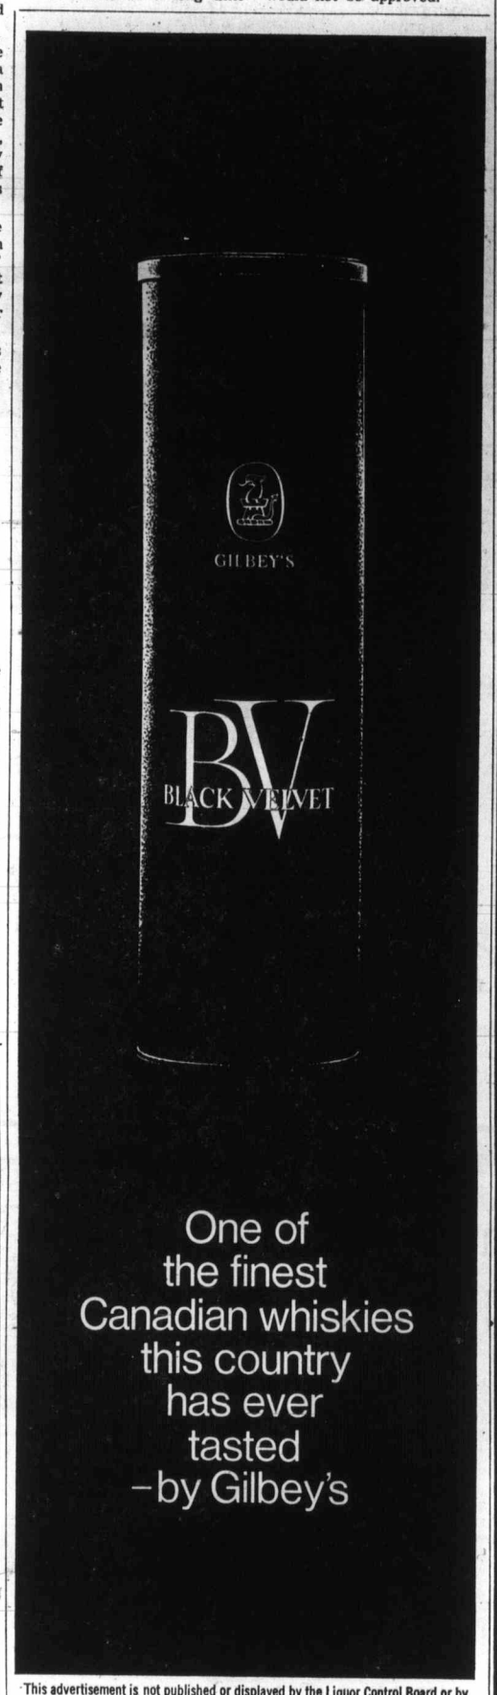

Miss Zulauf's nude body was found in a ravine near her home. Miss Erickson's body was found near the Cedar River with a stab wound in the chest. The bodies of the boys, Scott Andrews and Bradley Lyons, were found in a wooded area in South Renton, one strangled with a rope and the other stabbed.

Waterloo Still Great Battle Film

Too Much Cannon, Not Enough Content

By BILL THOMAS

Directors around the world seem to have become intoxicated with battles and the exercise of moving hordes of troops and material around.

We've been able to chomp away on our popcorn and look at the Charge of the Light Brigade, Lawrence of Arabia, Patton and now at the Royal Theatre, director Sergei Bondarchuk has tackled Waterloo.

It was, in historical hindsight, one of the crucial battles of history but just how strong a film it is may have to await a similar passage of time.

Waterloo is a great battle film with waves of charging horses, spouting cannons and the inevitable British squares of infantry who stood their ground and scribbled their own bit of history.

Napoleon almost pulled off the impossible. He escaped from exile on the island of Elba and marched across France, gathering strength in men until he forced Louis XVIII out of Paris.

The little Corsican military genius needed only one great disaster to buy martyrdom and the Duke of Wellington provided the opportunity in a muddy field in Belgium. That was Waterloo!

Rod Steiger plays Napoleon brilliantly and his portrayal is consistent with history. The general, or emperor as he preferred to be called, knew from the start he was in trouble. His health was ebbing and his mind had lost its crispness.

Steiger does communicate a great deal of the feeling but there is not enough of it in the film. Possibly the Russian director wanted to show us he could handle a giant-sized spectacular rather than a character study for this is, in effect, what he has done and done it very well.

Napoleon did face down the poised muskets of the great Marshal Ney who was sent to capture him and take him to Paris. It was Ney who returned in Napoleon's retinue.

After a rainy night Napoleon faced the combined forces of England and Prussia, and by all precedent should have carried the day. The big difference was that he faced the Duke of Wellington, played by Canadian Christopher Plummer.

Wellington was a man of icy calm and cool beyond imagining. He sat stiffly in his saddle unruffled as his companion lost a leg in cannon fire.

Plummer plays the Iron Duke with a very stiff upper lip, almost spray-starch. He never betrays any trace of humanity. Plummer is Wellington the legend while Steiger tries to be Napoleon the man.

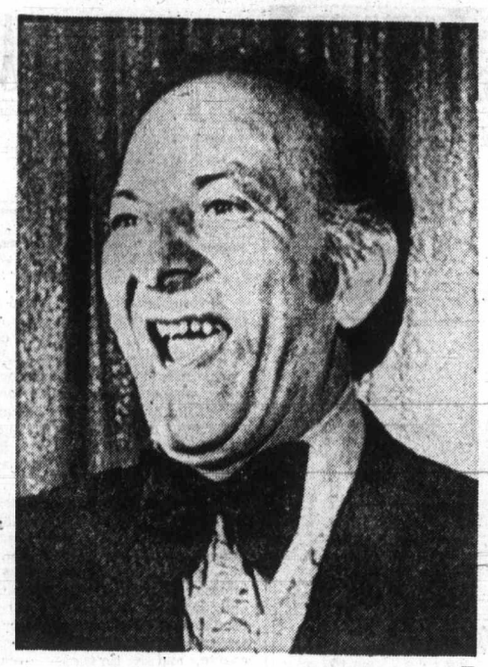

Bondarchuk has tried a few tricks which don't always come off. He switches to very-slow-motion shots of a cavalry charge, tries some close facial shots of the protagonists and generally drifts into spells of the purely arty. It's interesting but its effectiveness is open to debate.

Waterloo is a great, spectacular battle picture with a certain appeal. If we had been able to see a little more perspective and character definition, it could have been so much better.

Firebombs In Stores

BELFAST (UPI) — An explosion damaged a grocer's shop and more fire bombs were found in Belfast stores Monday in a new wave of Northern Ireland bombing incidents.

Police said the pre-dawn explosion damaged a grocer's shop in a Protestant neighborhood, a fire bomb ignited later in a furniture store and 12 more fire bombs were discovered and removed from a furniture store, a co-op supermarket and department store.

Scott Captures Emmy, And Accepts It

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—George C. Scott won—and accepted—television's Emmy for best single performance by an actor Sunday night as the Hallmark Hall of Fame series captured top honors with eight awards.

Actor Jack Cassidy accepted the Emmy for Scott, who last month refused to recognize the Oscar he was awarded for his role in Patton.

"I'm shocked," said Cassidy, nominated in the same category. "Not that Mr. Scott won the award but that he asked me to accept it for him."

Scott's acceptance of the emmy for his role in The Price on NBC was an obvious slap in the face to the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences, which voted him the best-actor Oscar.

He had said earlier he would accept the Emmy because it was decided by a panel of his peers and the television awards were not what he called the popularity contest of the Oscars.

The eight Hallmark Hall of Fame awards came for two NBC shows: Hamlet with five and The Price with three.

NBC recieved 35 of the 80 awards. CBS got 25, ABC 10 and PBS 9.

All in the family, the CBS satire on American bigotry, was named best comedy series of the season, and Jean Stapleton, co-star of the program, won the Emmy for best comedy actress. The show also was named outstanding new television series in preliminary awards Friday night.

Best actor in a comedy series went to Jack Klugman of ABC's The Odd Couple.

The Mary Tyler Moore Show, on CBS, edged by All in the Family for top comedy honors, took four awards, including best comedy actor and actress in supporting roles for Edward Asner and Valerie Harper.

'Unspoiled Scenic Locations'

B.C. Woos Filmland

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "You will make your next film in British Columbia — when you see what we have to offer."

That lure was offered to Hollywood movie-makers in a recent full-color brochure included in the local trade papers. The message, from British Columbia Premier W. A. C. Bennett:

"To motion picture producers, our province offers an endless selection of unspoiled scenic locations suitable for films of every type ... I cordially invite you to visit a few of our choice 'locations' in the near future."

British Columbia offers other advantages. It has two studios where interior scenes can be filmed. It can also provide the Eady Plan, by which producers can earn back revenue from movies made inside the British Commonwealth.

"We don't want to take away any production that can be done in Hollywood," says British Columbia's Hollywood representative Ivan Stauffer. "But we can offer unparalleled scenery, as well as production costs that are considerably less than here."

Among films that have succumbed to the Canadian lure: Five Easy Pieces, Carnal Knowledge and McCabe and Mrs. Miller, formerly The Presbyterian Church Wager.

British Columbia is not alone. A half-dozen of the U.S. states have been actively seeking film-company location. One of the most successful is New Mexico.

In 1968, New Mexico established a Film Industry Commission, which now is budgeted by the legislature at $100,000 a year. Results of the commission's efforts were seen last year. Eighteen features or documentaries with total budgets of $14 million were filmed within the state.

Vitamin Fights Air Pollution

DAVIS, Calif. (AP) — By exposing rats to ozone and giving them varying amounts of vitamin E, a University of California professor says he has found evidence the vitamin may ward off air pollution hazards.

Dr. Aloys Tappel, professor of food sciences, says in each of the experiments he conducted, most rats that died after exposure to the pollutant had diets deficient in the vitamin.

Tall Cabbages

Several letters have arrived on my desk this spring complaining of abnormally lanky growth in cabbage seedlings.

One lady described her indoor-raised young plants as looking like miniature palm trees, with a long bare stem and a topknot of leaves, and I have seen similar scrawny plants offered for sale at some of the garden centres and stalls.

This kind of growth is usually the result of too much warmth and insufficient light. In a well-managed greenhouse, it is prevented by adjusting the temperature to suit the light intensity, reducing the temperature on dull, overcast days. You can't juggle conditions in this way when your plants are raised on a kitchen windowsill, of course, and it isn't easy even in a proper greenhouse where a number of different kinds of plants are grown.

These long-stemmed cabbage plants pose certain difficulties when transplanting them to the open garden. The correct way to set out cabbage plants is low down, with the rosette of leaves almost touching the soil surface, but when the plant has developed a long, bare stem between roots and rosette, such low planting would put the roots much too deep, away down in cold, uncongenial subsoil.

These lanky plants needn't be a total loss, however. The trick here is to plant them on the slant, so the roots arestil l in the warm, upper soil even though the plant's bottom leaves are hugging the ground.

With any luck, the bare expanse of buried stem will put out more roots along its length and, of course, the more roots a plant has, the better growth you get.

This stunt works well with tomato plants too. Tomatoes always do best with their roots in warm soil, and they never amount to a pinch of coon feathers when set too deeply.

Planted on the slant, with the roots well up in sunwarmed surface soil and with the long, bare stem covered, it will almost always push out extra roots along the buried stem. Don't worry if the tip of the plant sticks out of the ground at a drunken angle — it will soon turn upward and make normal vertical growth.

As a matter of fact, this plant-on-the-slant business has many applications in gardening. I have often set out bedding geraniums at a 30-degree angle to the ground, pinching out the growing tip of the plant at the same time. Planted very firmly in this way, the sloping main stem will send up a flowering shoot from every leaf joint, giving three or four heads of bloom on each plant rather than one lone cluster.

The latest candidate for slant planting is the rose. Mr. F. F Fairbrother, president of the National Rose Society of Great Britain, describes the sloping-bottom planting hole in considerable detail in his excellent Penguin handbook on roses, published by the Royal Horticultural Society.

Mr. Percy Wright of Saskatoon, distinguished rose breeder and hybridizer, goes even further — he buries almost the whole rose bush in what he calls the "recumbent" position, with just the tips of the pruned stems sticking out of the soil surface on the slant.

According to Wright, the recumbent planting method allows one to place a good length of woody stem underground where it won't dry out, yet without getting the roots ABOVE the graft union.

This is something to be avoided in fruit trees, especially those grafted on dwarfing roots, but it is highly desirable to have your rose bushes growing on their own roots.

Bureaucrats Terrified

WASHINGTON — No one talks about it, but one of the greatest fears concerning the attempt of the anti-Vietnam demonstrators to close down Washington last week was that the taxpayer might have discovered that only half the people here were really needed to run the government.

I found this out when I rode downtown with my friend Phil Jaylan on that Monday morning when the protesters made their first attempt to keep government employees from getting to work.

Jaylan, who works in the Department of Bureaucratic Infinity, picked me up in his Volkswagen. I never saw him so nervous.

"Don't worry, Jaylan," I said, "there's not going to be any violence."

"I'm not worried about the violence," Jaylan said, perspiring. "I'm worried about my job."

"They won't fire you just because you're late one morning," I said.

"It isn't because I'm late. They may discover they don't need me."

"I don't understand," I said.

"Look," said Jaylan, "for 30 years the government's been expanding at a ferocious rate. New departments have come into being overnight, old departments have been beefed up for no reason. The government is so big that no one has any idea how many people it really needs to make it work any more."

"Everyone knows that, Jaylan," I said.

"But let's just suppose these crazy kids manage to shut down the bridges and roads from Maryland and Virginia. This would prevent 70 per cent of all government employees from getting to work."

"That would be a catastrophe," I said.

"But suppose it wasn't a catastrophe. Suppose the government discovered it only needed 30 per cent of its present work force."

"I never thought of that."

"This demonstration is being covered by all the media," Jaylan said. "In the event that the protesters succeed in their shutdown and the government still operates smoothly, the whole country will know by tonight how few people it really needs to take care of the nation's business."

"We can't let it happen," I said to Jaylan as we skirted around a trash can on two wheels."

"I have to beat Bradley to the office," he said.

"Why Bradley?"

"He sits next to me. If he gets to work and I don't, they'll discover he can do my job as well as his. If I get there and Bradley doesn't, I can prove they don't need Bradley."

"Gosh, Jaylan," I said, "that sounds like dog eat dog."

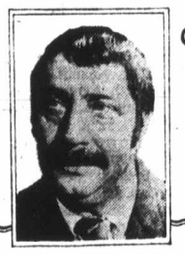

"It isn't just me. You see all those cars bumper to bumper out there? In everyone of them is a Jaylan trying to beat a Bradley to work. These people are willing to take nails in their tires, dents in their fenders, tear gas in their eyes, anything, as long as no one finds out they are expendable."

A truck was stalled in the middle of the street and Jaylan and I lifted his Volkswagen over it and then we took off again. "Bradley will never be able to do that," Jaylan cackled, "not with his station wagon."

By driving mostly on the sidewalk through Georgetown, Jaylan made it to his office on time. That evening on the way home he revealed to me that not one person in the bureau was absent.

"As a matter of fact, there were several people on vacation and sick leave who came in to make sure their jobs weren't eliminated.

"It sure was close," Jaylan sighed. "If it hadn't been for the brilliant work of the police and military, the government might have had to cut its payroll in half."

On Superstitions

My youngest child asked me the other day why I blessed her when she sneezed. I explained that it was an ancient custom — a superstition, really — because a sneeze was supposed to indicate that the soul had left the body temporarily, and the blessing "made sure" it returned.

"Did people really believe that?" she exclaimed, and I assured her that they did, including many brilliant and learned people of their time. "I'm glad we don't live in those silly times," she said smugly, and I held my tongue.

Actually, the human race is almost incurably superstitious. The content of the superstitions may change over the centuries, but the basic attitude remains pretty much the same.

And, of course, the content varies, depending upon the education and income-level of the person; our superstitions simply become more sophisticated, but not more rational.

Indeed, the leading superstition of our time may be the prevalent belief among the educated that we are more rational than our forebears.

It is quite true that most of us have forsaken the primitive superstitions associated with sneezing, ladders, black cats, the number 13 and all that nonsense; but have we not replaced them with more plausible ones?

Today's general belief in something called "progress" for the human race is certainly founded more on hope and anxiety than on reason or history.

The 20th century, despite its technological advances, has seen far more people killed by war and genocide than any previous time; it may be simply a superstition born of dread to believe that we have made any real progress at all in the human condition.

Most educated people today also believe that "disease will eventually be conquered." Nothing in reason leads to this conclusion; in fact, perfect health is an irrational and unobtainable ideal, and might mean the end of the race even if we could obtain it.

Rene Dubos, the brilliant microbiologist for the Rockefeller Institute, has analyzed this modern superstition with devastating clarity.

In point of fact, the violently "anti-superstition" people of today are themselves the victims of a gigantic superstition: namely, that science and education can and will remove the men's minds.

What they have done is remove many old ones and substituted a number of new ones, some of which are far more dangerous to the community than their ancient archetypes.

Mankind adapts by various mechanisms and dynamisms, and superstition is one way of confessing humility toward the cosmos; it is our pride of knowledge more than our humility of ignornance that may in the end undo us.

MARILYN BECK

It's nice to see Samantha Eggar's costly divorce from Tom Stern (he got $25,000 and she supports their children) hasn't soured her on men. Samantha and folk singer Kris Kristofferson have such a close thing going these days they've been off together on an Acapulco holiday. Kris is the fellow who was once Barbra Streisand's special guy. And his hits include, most appropriately, it turns out now, For the Good Times and Help Me Make It Through the Night.

It's nice that Robert Wagner has managed to remain such close pals with his two stepsons via estranged wife Marion's first marriage to Stanley Donen. The Wagners have filed to dissolve the union, but the youngsters continue to spend much of their vacation time with Bob at his Beverly Hills pad. It was Wagner who filed for the divorce. He was going to allow Marion that courtesy, but tired of her delaying making the move. Of course, he and Christina Sinatra are terribly eager for him to be free.

Many of the industry's new film directors are coming from the world of magazine photography and television commercial directing these days. Which is a switch. We used to draw most of them from the Broadway stage. Faye Dunaway's ex-fiance, ex-high fashion photographer Jerry Schatzberg, and Richard Lester and John Schlesinger started the new trend. The latest is Dick Richards, now on the Fox lot — one of the FEW directors on that lot—in preproduction on an off-beat, epic western he penned, with the tentative title, We Pointed 'Em North. What's ironic is that Dick is coining less loot for the big screen film than he gets for one of his 60-second teleblurbs. That is showbiz.

The pop crowd should be delighted to learn Jesus Christ Superstar, Decca's two-million-plus hit rock-pop opera album, is going to be produced on the stage in the U.S. and in England. And then, say the fellows at MCA backing the project, a movie version will be made. Tim Rice and Andrew Lloyd Webber, who created the album, are working on both adaptations.

ALL SORTS: ABC has claimed the ratings victory in the January-March second season on the three U.S. networks, saying it averaged 30.4 to 29.5 for CBS and 29.2 for NBC . . As for program plans, ABC will do a 90-minute daytime drama once a month next season and will turn Love, American Style into a daytime half-hour as well as an evening hour.

Might as well add one more ABC report: the third network says Dick Cavett's audience has jumped 47 per cent in the past year.

A note for Duke Ellington fans — scream-trumpeter Cat Anderson has retired (and I can remember when he started) . . . actor House Jameson, who was Henry Aldrich's radio father, died at 68 in Danbury, Conn., and adman Gilson Gray died at 73 in Providence. In 1927, he dreamed up the Coca Cola phrase "The pause that refreshes."

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Saturday's answer — The seven singer-actresses who starred on Broadway in Hello, Dolly! were Carol Channing, Ginger Rogers, Betty Grable, Pearl Bailey, Martha Raye, Phyllis Diller and Ethel Merman. Miss Merman, by the way, was David Merrick's choice for the role but turned it down, so Channing got it by default.

Today's question — Three showbusiness greats were brothers born Leonard, Adolph and Julius. They had two other brothers and they (the first three, that is) made 13 movies together. Just name them. Answers Wednesday.

"Personally, I dislike movies with a message."

Tuesday Highlights

Cape Mudge Vote Seen On Municipal Status

By IAN STREET

A referendum involving some 300 residents of Cape Mudge on Quadra Island to decide whether they shall form Canada's first Indian municipality now seems assured.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said Monday the provincial government has accepted an agreement which would allow reserve dwellers to exercise the powers of self-government under the B.C. Municipal Act.

The seven-page document, signed by Campbell and a senior federal official in Vancouver last Friday, still must be formally ratified by the federal cabinet but this approval is expected to be given speedily by Ottawa.

The result, Campbell told a press conference here, will be a referendum, likely in the fall, which will require a 75 per cent majority vote of the band to approve the agreement.

Meanwhile Cape Mudge Band Council chief Lawrence Lewis said Monday night the municipality question was now entirely up to his people.

The council will meet later this week after it gets official approval of the referendum from Campbell, and Lewis will report progress to the reserve Indians.

He said there had been support and some opposition to the municipality move and a majority of 75 per cent was a large majority to get.

However, he said he was hoping it would go through.

The move was first talked about seven years ago on the reserve but "we have really only dug in with negotiations in the past two years," Lewis said.

Campbell said as far as B.C. is concerned, the document contains all the provisions sought by the province. These include a guarantee that federal funds, services and programs now available to the Indians will be continued if the municipality is formed.

Campbell said the main significance of the agreement is the degree of self-government and control of development which Indian bands will be able to acquire through incorporation. But it also means the homeowner grant and home acquisition grant, along with many other forms of provincial assistance to municipalities, will become available to Indians living on reserves.

Provincial mortgage assistance, however, won't be made available because the government wants to preserve the special status of Indian lands under the Indian Act and therefore cannot hold a lien on this property.

There will also be no tax sales of lands in an Indian municipality, a federal government guarantee will be required on borrowing of sums in excess of $15,000, and four of five councillors including the mayor must be Indians.

Federal authorities would continue to be responsible for water and sewer installations, and cost sharing on local roads would be 80 per cent federal, 10 per cent provincial and 10 per cent local.

Mission Saves Youths

CHEMAINUS — Chemainus volunteer fireman, neighbors and RCMP pooled efforts late Saturday and early Sunday to rescue two young boys who had fallen down a 150-foot embankment at the Chemainus River.

The boys, Larry Green, 12, of Henry Road, Chemainus, and Dale Herbertson, 14, from Victoria, escaped serious injury and were able to return to the residence of Larry's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Green, after being checked by a doctor at the scene.

Dale suffered some abrasions. He was staying with the Greens during the weekend. RCMP at Chemainus said the two boys were exploring the area west of Henry Road when they suddenly plunged down the embankment to the river bank.

The rescue mission lasted from midnight Saturday until about 2:30 a.m. Sunday.

Mrs. Green said: "We did not know anything about the river and the bank. The neighbors were extremely helpful. Without their help it would have been much more difficult to do anything."

Walker Reaches Midpoint Without Blisters

WILLOW POINT — Centennial walker Bill Hembroff reached the 170 mile point in his Island-long trek when he rested at Willow Point Monday night and so far he hasn't got a single blister.

Hembroff, 48, stopped the night at the point, which is about 20 miles north of Courtenay.

"I've had no problems so far, not even a blister," he said Monday night as he looked north toward Cape Scott — his destination, 400 miles from Victoria.

But now the walk gets more serious. Hembroff expects to be almost alone after he treks through Courtenay and tackles the tougher, more rugged country ahead.

The walk is an effort to raise $10,000 for a centennial museum for Courtenay, and Hembroff hopes to reach the cape by May 25, after averaging 20 miles a day.

Hembroff, who lives in Courtenay, has been staying with friends and relatives overnight.

He is carrying a scroll which is being signed by mayors and chairmen of centennial committees as he makes his way up the Island.

Motorists with friendly "beeps" make each day brighter for the walker. He said he makes about eight stops a day "just talking to interested people."

"As far as human nature is concerned, this has to be the best way to find out about it," he said.

In Trade Regulations

National Good Rules

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada ruled in a judgment published Monday that the federal government may regulate commerce inside a province so long as the intervention is promoting a wider, national policy.

The ruling by six of the nine supreme Court justices thus reaffirmed decisions dating from 1931. They awarded precedence to federal powers, in furtherance of national policies, over the constitutional right of a provincial government to regulate trade within its borders.

The judgment arose from an appeal last year by Caloil Inc. of Montreal against new federal regulations that had the effect of limiting the distribution of gasoline imported by Caloil to a small area of eastern Ontario and to provinces east of there.

The regulations, first proclaimed last May 7, were designed to enforce adherence to the previously-voluntary national oil policy. That policy aims to reserve all Canada west of a line through eastern Ontario as an exclusive market for Canadian petroleum products. Imports may be sold east of the Ontario line.

Caloil challenged the regulations in the Exchequer Court of Canada on the ground that they were unconstitutional.

Justice Wilbur Jackett, president of the court, agreed Aug. 1 that the legislation governing petroleum distribution under the national oil policy and the new regulations went beyond federal authority.

Amended federal regulations Aug. 12 specified that imports licensed by the National Energy Board must meet marketing requirements consistent with the national oil policy.

Caloil challenged again, and Justice Jacques Dumoulin of the exchequer court ruled that the legislation behind the new import regulations was within federal powers.

North Space Link

WASHINGTON (UPI)—NASA and a Canadian communications firm Monday signed a contract to launch two satellites designed to bring television and improved telephone service to Canada's isolated north country.

The two Anik (Eskimo for "brother") satellites will give Canada the world's first communications satellite system built entirely for domestic use.

Judge Withdraws

SAN RAFAEL, Calif. (UPI) — Co-defendant Ruchell Magee forced another judge out of the Angela Davis case Monday and another long delay was seen in getting it to trial.

Superior Court judge Alan Lindsay, who only last week had survived a challenge by Miss Davis to his qualifications, ruled Monday that a disqualification motion by Magee, her 31-year-old co-defendant, was peremptory.

Under California law, Magee has only one peremptory challenge, but when he uses it, the judge involved has no recourse but to withdraw.

Senator Shouts At Nader

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Consumer crusader Ralph Nader accused the automobile industry Monday of "criminal fraud or criminal negligence," provoking Sen. Theodore Stevens, R-Alaska, into an angry, shouted rebuttal.

Nader told the Senate commerce committee that a bill designed to require cars that are less damagable and more easily repaired was too weak in light of the industry's "criminal fraud or criminal negligence in the design of motor vehicles."

Stevens, slapping his desk, told Nader, "You look for the worst in people and not at what's good that's happening in this country."

Nader shot back: "Do you give credit to a burglar because he doesn't burglarize 99 per cent of the time? What kind of nonsense is this?"

COURTENAY — She was 82 years old and the cancellation of the queen's visit to Cumberland, "was the dirtiest trick" that's ever been played on her.

"It's a downright shame," Mrs. Ellen Miller complained.

"I came to Cumberland 59 years ago, and at that time there wasn't even any Courtenay, but Cumberland was a bustling place, a roaring town," she said, looking out at the 500 or so Cumberland folk who had come to Courtenay's Woodcote Park Monday to catch a glimpse of the queen, Prince Philip and Princess Anne.

And a fleeting glimpse it was. It took the royal party exactly 45 seconds to drive past the Cumberland contingent. Sitting in an open car, the queen seemed unaware of the controversy that had been caused by the cancellation of her visit to Cumberland, about five miles west of Courtenay.

Cumberland Mayor Bill Moncrief said that he had been invited to meet the royal family at Comox, but that he did not go.

Asked why, he said he didn't "want to go into all that again."

He said he was "tired of all this nonsense. I had my reasons and they were good ones, and they have been plastered all over the papers. I don't want to say anything more that may spoil the queen's visit."

The park, which had been given to Cumberland residents as an assembly place for the big day, was virtually empty an hour before the queen's arrival.

There were a few Canadian Legion members, a few senior citizens, several dozen school children and the Mayor.

"I have the greatest admiration for the queen," said Moncrief before the royal party arrived.

"But I'm not going to be standing in the front line to welcome her. It still makes me mad to think that first she was all set to drive through Cumberland and then all of a sudden, the trip is called off."

The people of Cumberland, he said, were still all very upset about the decision to take the town out of the queen's itinerary because of what tour officials said was lack of time.

"Don't make me laugh. A very casual tour it was going to be. I wonder what's so casual about shaking the hands of all these tin gods the queen has to meet every day?" Moncrief said.

The mayor's mood was reflected in the Cumberland crowd's general attitude. They were going to greet the queen politely, maybe gladly, but not over-enthusiastically.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Miller continued telling people around her what she thought of the whole thing.

Paris Lowers Mart Barrier To U.K. Entry

BRUSSELS (AP) — France, which twice has blackballed British bids to join the European Economic Community, made at least one clear concession Monday in its new proposals on bringing Britain into the common market.

The French dropped a demand for a promise of drastic cuts in British sugar imports from Commonwealth countries, especially Jamaica, Guyana and Mauritius.

This was certain to disappoint French sugar beet growers, long a powerful group. But it won the general approval of other common market members and an expression of optimism from Geoffrey Rippon, the chief British negotiator.

The British negotiator told reporters at Brussels Airport the French offer was a sign that a way through the bargaining difficulties would begin to appear in the next few days.

Another new French proposal was disclosed. It dealt with the sum Britain should contribute to the EEC budget in its first years of membership.

Other market countries appear to favor the proposal. It lays down a formula including collections from British duties on farm and industrial products, and a sum calculated from the size of Britian's gross national product. There also would be a rebate, which is what the other members and Britian want most to know about.

On other issues there was less progress.

The French put forward a proposal on the future of the pound sterling, a subject the British have been trying to avoid.

The French want a promise that every year for 20 years the British would pay back five per cent of its debts, called sterling balances, a total of $10,320 million, owed to dozens of countries. Other member countries would be satisfied with a statement by the British that they want to reduce the sum.

Floating Mark Rides Out Dollar Storm

BONN (UPI)—Emergency currency action by west European nations appeared Monday to have eased the international monetary crisis. The U.S. dollar steadied during the day on some markets and the wholesale selling of dollars by speculators ended for the time being.

Devaluation in Austria dropped the dollar to its lowest point since the end of the Second World War and the "floating" of the West German mark had the effect of devaluating the dollar 3.75 per cent. But the dollar was firm in London, Paris and some other money centres.

Money speculators were reported holding back in West Germany, betting the mark would be worth more in the next few days.

In Washington, the U.S. treasury department said it felt the international financial crisis was improving and "no immediate action" was planned. International banker Ezra Zilkha in New York said the emergency period was over although the "basic questions" remain unsolved. And Nobel Prize-winning economist Paul A. Samuelson in Cambridge, Mass., said the measures would restore "equilibrium" to European markets and should not be considered "an economic Pearl Harbor."

In West Germany, the crisis centre, an expected immediate outflow of dollars failed to materialize on the first trading day since exchanges were closed Wednesday in Germany, Switzerland, Austria, the Netherlands and Belgium.

The problem began last week as traders and speculators flooded West German banks with dollars considered overvalued against the healthy and prosperous mark. By purchasing marks and holding them, the speculators could clear a profit when trading them back to receive more dollars than originally invested if the dollar slipped in value.

But throughout the capitals of Europe Monday, trading was cautious. Observers felt many speculators were hoping the mark would rise to as much as 5 per cent above the old parity of 3.66 to the dollar, or perhaps an official

Not All Sandspit Color Ceremonial

White Curse, Red Heap

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Staff Reporter

SANDSPIT — That wasn't the red carpet Queen Elizabeth saw Monday when she looked down the stairs from the official platform at this Queen Charlotte Islands airport and logging centre.

It was a fallen Haida Indian dancer in a crimson native robe — victim of one of the curses the white world inflicted on his people a long time ago.

He was drunk.

"Someone gave him the drink today," said his mother, a member of the colorful dancing group that — despite the one unrehearsed incident — thoroughly pleased the queen, Prince Philip and their daughter, Princess Anne.

The queen, in particular, spent much time chatting with the brightly-robed Indians afterward.

The wobbly dancer, who had spun away from the rest of the group prior to the arrival of the royal visitors, had a hard time keeping his headgear from slipping down over his eyes.

Suddenly he tumbled to the ground at one side of the stairs and lay there in a heap, the first object the queen saw when she looked down the platform. She smiled briefly.

When he tried to give a repeat performance a little later, a smiling RCMP officer took him gently to the edge of the grass clearing where the dance was taking place — the tribesman attempting to turn the officer into a dancing partner as they went.

Proud, Sad

It all seemed to fit into place with what Chief Willy Matthews had been saying a little earlier.

The 85-year-old chief of the Haida Eagle tribe is a proud man who is glad to greet his queen and who has deep respect for the flag, but he is not happy with what the white world has done to his people.

"Personally I don't believe in this junk," he said of the plastic that had been affixed to his wooden headress in place of the whale's teeth that were once used.

"I don't think it has been good for us," he said — "this civilized life your people brought. We're modern now. We smoke cigarettes and swear in English."

There was a touch of sadness in the old man's tones. He could just as easily had said white man taught the Haida to drink alcohol and that one day one of his men would fall down before the queen.

Fire Sweeps London Hotel Killing Seven, Injuring Nine

LONDON (CP) — Fire swept through a five-storey London hotel early today and firemen reported seven persons were killed.

One woman leaped from a window and was impaled on railings below, a policeman reported.

"It was terrible," he said. "She was taken away alive, I think. People were screaming and shouting from windows all over the hotel."

Firemen scrambled up ladders in search of other guests possibly trapped by heavy flames and smoke.

Scotland Yard said nine persons were injured. The Yard reported earlier that 40 persons had been taken to hospitals, but a spokesman said later that was an exaggeration caused by confusion at the scene.

The Hills is one of several hotels in the area that attracts tourists seeking comfortable accommodations at rates lower than the top London hotels.

Several hundred people, many in their night clothes, watched the drama, their faces grim. Relays of ambulances skirted the crowds taking casualties to hospital.

The hotel is undergoing extensive renovations and only about 30 persons were in the

Bus Plunge Kills 76

SEOUL (AP) — A bus jammed with at least 90 persons missed a curve and plunged down a 50-foot cliff into a reservoir Monday, killing at least 76 persons.

It was South Korea's worst bus accident.

Police said 14 persons had been rescued and 76 bodies recovered after the smashed bus was brought up from the waters of Chongpyong reservoir, 20 miles east of Seoul.

B.C. Not for Sale — Bennett

Province-First Policy Set for Parley

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislature Reporter

Premier Bennett said Monday he plans to present "a British Columbia first" policy to the federal-provincial constitutional talks which are to be held here in mid-June.

The premier added he also wished to serve notice on Ottawa that "British Columbia is not for sale."

Referring to an Ottawa report, published last weekend in the Victoria Times, which indicated that the provincial government might be willing to negotiate the sale of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway to the federal government, Bennett said he wanted to remove all doubt from the minds of the public and federal authorities.

"Bennett and British Columbia will not sell the PGE. British Columbia is not for sale and the PGE is part of the great public ownership of this province," he said.

Bennett added: "British Columbia is going to be more forceful in seeing it gets a fair share in Confederation which it isn't getting now. We will be forceful — we will be good hosts, but we will present British Columbia's point of view.

"I am just advising Ottawa and the prime minister as he moves into Russia that we intend to keep control over our own development."

The premier said it would be more logical if Ottawa took up his repeated offers over the years to sell the Canadian National line from Prince George to Prince Rupert to B.C. for a nominal amount so that it could become part of the PGE.

"Ottawa never has any confidence and faith in the north," he said. "Only the PGE opened up our great northern areas for the benefit of the people of the province. Do you think that we would sell this dynamic railroad to a government 3,000 miles away that has no interest in the north?

"Of course not."

Etna Grows Dangerous

CATANIA, Sicily (AP) — Mount Etna's worst eruption in two decades became dangerous Monday as lava spouted from new vents almost half way down the mountain and streamed toward the towns of Milo and Fornazzo.

The new outbreak Sunday night was at the 5,905-foot level of the 10,826-foot volcano. By dawn the streams of molten rock had reached the 3,608-foot level.

Orr (2), Bucyk, Perreault Win Trophy Voting

MONTREAL (CP) — Bobby Orr of Boston Bruins was presented with two trophies Monday at the National Hockey League's award luncheon but he said he'd settle for one that got away — the Stanley Cup.

Orr, who last year won the Ross Trophy as the top scorer, the Norris Trophy as the top defenceman, the Hart Trophy as the most valuable player and the Smythe Trophy as the outstanding player in the Stanley Cup playdowns, retained the Norris and Hart trophies.

FOUR IN ROW

It was the fourth successive time in his five-year career that the 23-year-old defenceman has won the Norris Trophy. That matched the record of Doug Harvey, who also won it on three other occasions.

In retaining the Hart Trophy, Orr became the second defenceman to win it twice. Eddie Shore, selected in 1933, 1935, 1936 and 1938, was the first. Gordie Howe leads with six Hart Trophy selections.

Two of Orr's teammates also took trophies. Phil Esposito won the Ross Trophy for scoring a record 152 points, exactly half of them goals. And John Bucyk, who had only eight minutes in penalties, was named the winner of the Lady Byng Award as the player best combining ability and good conduct on the ice.

Other winners were Gilbert Perreault of Buffalo Sabres, who won the Calder Trophy as the season's best rookie, and Ed Giacomin and Gilles Villemure of New York Rangers, who combined to win the Vezina Trophy, which goes to the goalkeepers on the team permitting the fewest goals against.

Orr was a handy winner in the balloting for the Norris Trophy but got stiff competition from Esposito before the most-valuable-player award was decided.

It was almost unanimous as top defenceman with 308 out of a possible 210 points and Brad Park of New York Rangers a distant second at 57 points. J. C. Tremblay of Montreal Canadiens and Pat Stapleton of Chicago Black Hawks were next with 35 and 23 points, respectively.

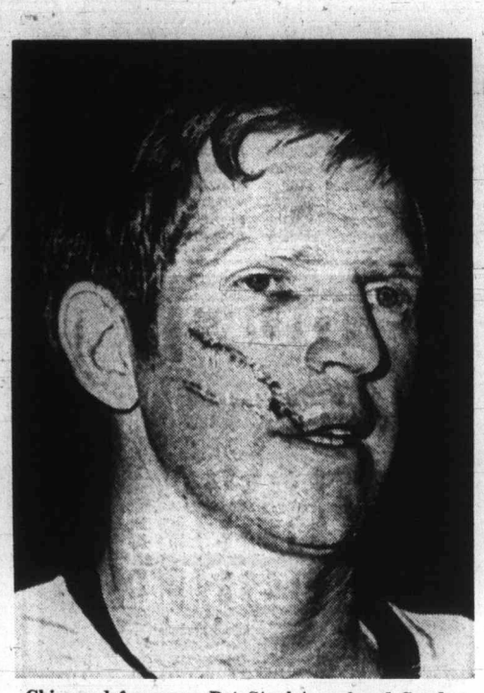

Orr had 151 points and Esposito 127 in the Hart Trophy balloting in a two-man battle which left Bobby Hull of the Hawks third with 28 points and Dave Keon of Toronto fourth with 20 points.

It was also fairly close in Lady Byng Award balloting. Bucyk, who had never won it before, got 166 points while Keon, a two-time winner in the past, drew 131 points. Jean Ratelle of the Rangers was a distant third with 34 points and then came Bobby Hull with eight.

Perreault, who set records with 38 goals and 72 points, was expectedly a runaway winner for the rookie award. He received 204 points with Jude Drouin of Minnesota North Stars next with 68 and Villemure third with 48 points.

Tom Webster of Detroit Red Wings and Dale Tallon of Vancouver Canucks were fourth and fifth with 25 and 12 points, respectively.

Winners of the Hart, Norris, Lady Byng and Calder Trophies will get $1,500 each and the runners-up are to receive $750.

Chicago-defenceman Pat Stapleton played Sunday without face mask and showing prominently was the stitching job necessary after skate cut suffered in Thursday game. It was reported that 52 stitches were needed to close gaping wound but Stapleton said he counted 70 and wasn't through when he gave up.

Canadiens Confident After Fine Comeback

MONTREAL — Montreal Canadiens were in confident mood Monday as they prepared for the fourth game of the Stanley Cup final while Chicago Black hawks were still simmering a bit about the refereeing in Sunday's game.

"When my team plays like that I know we're going to win," said Montreal-coach Al MacNeil after Sunday's 4-2 victory which left his club trailing the best-of-seven series, 1-2.

COMPLAINT

"We weren't helped by the refereeing, for sure," said Chicago-coach Billy Reay while Stan Mikita claimed that it was what wasn't called that hurt the losers.

Reay and Mikita both felt that the turning point came when Pete Mahovlich upended defenceman Keith Magnuson, stole the puck and scored Canadiens first goal.

The play came in the sixth minute of the second period and the Hawks felt that the burly centreman should have had a penalty, a call which would have left them leading by 2-0.

But the Hawks met a far different club Sunday than the one which lost the first two games in Chicago. Canadiens tried to carry the action from the start and held an edge throughout. They dropped behind and took a long time to go ahead mainly because they had trouble finishing off their plays.

The forcing play bothered the Hawks as much as it had bothered Canadiens in the first two games, bringing errors and penalties often enough to eventually prove costly.

Hawks cashed in on a penalty to Pete Mahovlich for the game's first goal, Bobby Hull setting up Cliff Koroll. Then Hull got credit for his 11th goal of the current playdowns when the puck, shot by Jim Pappin, hit him as he was being pushed out of the play. It deflected high past the surprised Ken Dryden and it seemed Hawks were on their way to a third straight win.

Tonight's game will be televised on Channels 2 and 6 and broadcast on radio station CBU (690) starting at 5.

BOTHERSOME PAIR

But they couldn't cope with a club which this time didn't quit skating and they particularly had trouble with the Mahovlich family.

After Pete had cut the lead in two, Frank tied it up late in the second period with the Hawks playing two men short. The veteran winger was allowed to work his way in and his blasting shot was too hot to handle.

Defenceman Terry Harper, who got to enjoy the rarity of Montreal Forum cheers for his performance, set up the winning goal with a fine rush which carried him in behind the Chicago goal and drew two checkers.

A third Hawk went to the boards as Jean Beliveau moved in to help out but Harper managed to slide the puck out front.

COOL PAIR

Waiting for it were Yvan Cournoyer and John Ferguson, and they were so alone that Ferguson calmly moved out of the firing line as Cournoyer carefully picked his spot and fired past Tony Esposito.

Frank Mahovlich, tying the playoff record of 13 goals set last year by Phil Esposito, blasted in the insurance goal less than six minutes later and the Hawks, tiring badly, were no serious threat in the remaining time.

Both goals by the elder Mahovlich came while Bobby Hull was in the penalty box and the Hawks appeared to seriously miss his services as a penalty-killer.

NO CHANGES

Neither club announced any lineup changes for tonight's game. The series moves to Chicago Thursday for the fifth game and if a sixth is needed it will be in Montreal on Sunday.

Gorge Vale Pair To Take On Pros

The chase for the Vancouver Island Open golf championship is down to a field of two professionals, both former Victorians, and two Gorge Vale amateurs following Sunday's quarter-final matches at Gorge Vale.

Advancing to next Sunday's 36-hole semi-finals at Uplands are professionals Bill Wakeham of Cowichan and Norm Boden of Marsh Meadows and amateurs Bob Beauchemin, the 16-year-old medalist, and 45-year-old Reg Clarkson.

TOUGH TIME

Clarkson had the stiffest battle on Sunday coming from behind twice on the back nine to oust former city amateur champion Rick Kent of Glen Meadows on the 18th green.

Boden defeated Royal Colwood amateur Jim McMurran, 2 and 1; Wakeham stopped Uplands' assistant-pro Don Billsborough, 4 and 2; and Beauchemin won an all-junior match from Colwood's Sid Murdoch, 4 and 2.

Clarkson's sand wedge was his salvation on Sunday. One down after nine holes, he came up with tremendous chips from traps to win the 10th hole and halve the 12th and 14th holes.

Kent went up a hole again on the 16th when he sank a two-foot birdie putt, but Clarkson drew even on the 17th hole with a par and took the match when Kent ran into trouble in deep rough after hooking his drive on the 18th tee.

Beauchemin, whose first shot of the day hooked wildly into tall timber and forced him to declare a lost ball, conceded the first hole to Murdoch's par four. However, he halved the second, won the third and was never again threatened.

Wakeham and Billsborough were even with approximate 39s, two over par, for the first nine holes but Wakeham exploded to win the next four holes with a birdie and three pars and was one-over par when the match ended.

Boden scrambled to his victory over McMurran, the two-time winner, being approximately nine-over par for the 17-holes needed.

In the handicap division for the Hugh Francis Trophy, George Murphy and Harry Panteluk of Gorge Vale advanced to the semi-finals along with Doug Hunt of Cedar Hill and Marty Smith of Uplands.

Murphy downed clubmate Pat Thody, 5 and 4; Panteluk stopped Uplands' Al Brown, 5 and 4; Smith finished 1-up over Greg Barnes of Cedar Hill and Hunt stopped clubmate Ray Saxon on the 18th.

Duncan Cricket XI Shares League Lead

Cowichan moved into a first-place tie with Albions in the Victoria and District Cricket Association on Sunday with a five-wicket victory over Oak Bay at Beacon Hill Park.

Peter Wilson took four wickets for 14 runs as Oak Bay was dismissed for 67, including 12 not out by junior John Courtenay. Brian Gorman's 25 not out led Cowichan to 68 for five wickets.

In Sunday's other game, Alcos evened their record with a two-wicket victory over Incogs at University School.

Geoff Rooper scored 22 runs as Incogs reached 91, all out, with Alco bowlers Joe Armstrong and Mike Dodd taking three wickets for seven runs and four for 14, respectively.

John Moss, with 40 runs, and Dodd, with 24, led Alco batsmen to 95 for eight.

Pulp Workers' Raise Could Be Given Up

VANCOUVER (CP) — The president of the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureaus, bargaining agent for B.C. pulp producers, said Monday firms have been informally discussing whether to ask trade unions to forego a scheduled July 1 wage increase because of poor markets.

Don Lanskail stressed, however, the matter has not been talked about at the official bureau level, as would be necessary before any approach is made to the unions.

"I can say that there have been informal discussions among a number of companies about trying to have the wage increase hoisted and about other approaches to the problem," he said in an interview.

"They are a reflection of the very serious market situation at the present time, which has caused a number of mill closures for a couple of weeks and consideration of further closures later on this year.

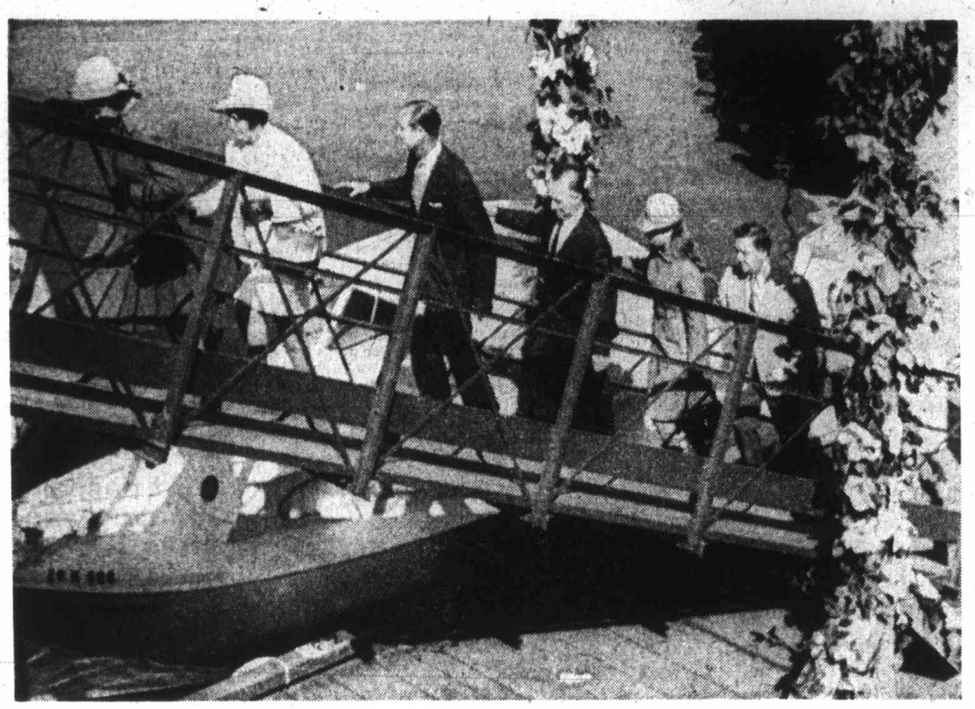

"The discussions about the wage increase are taking place on an ad hoc basis as the companies look around for a solution to their problems."

Lanskail said the closure and layoff situation is "far from normal." He said several companies' inventories are so high that their storage facilities are full and bales of pulp are stacked outside, protected by plastic sheets.

He cautioned that the ramifications of having the unions forego the increase —reopening of the master agreement and deciding on the ground rules of hoisting the boost — might present problems that would make the proposal itself impractical.

The matter may come down to whether the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada and the United Papermakers and Paperworkers would trade the wage boost for assurance that there will be no more layoffs.

The question comes at a time when several companies are experiencing growing inventories of unsold pulp, and layoffs of workers due to temporary plant closures have directly affected 3,500 of about 11,000 employees.

Cape Mudge Indians First

Vote Will Determine Municipality Move

A referendum involving some 300 residents of Cape Mudge on Quadra Island to decide whether they shall form Canada's first Indian municipality now seems assured.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said Monday the provincial government has accepted an agreement which would allow reserve dwellers to exercise the powers of self-government under the B.C. Municipal Act.

The seven-page document, signed by Campbell and a senior federal official in Vancouver last Friday, still must be formally ratified by the federal cabinet but this approval is expected to be given speedily by Ottawa.

The result, Campbell told a press conference here, will be a referendum, likely in the fall, which will require a 75 per cent majority vote of the band to approve the agreement.

Meanwhile Cape Mudge Band Council chief Lawrence Lewis said Monday night the municipality question was now entirely up to his people.

The council will meet later this week after it gets official approval of the referendum from Campbell, and Lewis will report progress to the reserve Indians.

He said there had been support and some opposition to the municipality move and a majority of 75 per cent was a large majority to get.

However, he said he was hoping it would go through.

The move was first talked about seven years ago on the reserve but "we have really only dug in with negotiations in the past two years," Lewis said.

Campbell said as far as B.C. is concerned, the document contains all the provisions sought by the province. These include a guarantee that federal funds, services and programs now available to the Indians will be continued if the municipality is formed.

Campbell said the main significance of the agreement is the degree of self-government and control of development which Indian bands will be able to acquire through incorporation. But it also means the homeowner grant and home acquisition grant, along with many other forms of provincial assistance to municipalities, will become available to Indians living on reserves.

Provincial mortgage assistance, however, won't be made available because the government wants to preserve the special status of Indian lands under the Indian Act and therefore cannot hold a lien on this property.

There will also be no tax sales of lands in an Indian municipality, a federal government guarantee will be required on borrowing of sums in excess of $15,000, and four of five councillors including the mayor must be Indians.

Federal authorities would continue to be responsible for water and sewer installations, and cost sharing on local roads would be 80 per cent federal, 10 per cent provincial and 10 per cent local.

Duncan Pupils in Kamloops

Education By Travel

DUNCAN — "You sure learn a lot more than you do sitting in class."

That was the view of 14-year-old Randy Wise after a five-day educational trip to Kamloops last week. Randy was one of 35 students from Alexander Aiken elementary school at Duncan who made the trip.

The trip had been in the planning stages since October, according to teacher Peter Yelland, who accompanied his Grade 7 class to Kamloops. "The actual preparation and afterwork involves about two months of work," he said.

"Prior to the visit the students amassed information about the Kamloops area. Different areas of study in class used information concerning the trip as part of their program both before and following the visit."

Yelland cited examples of the math class using problems derived from the trip's itinerary. English compositions using comparison and contrast for Duncan and Kamloops, and language-art-social studies problems questioning various aspects of the visit.

'Actual Participation'

"We wanted to familiarize the children with another area with a different climate, ecology, and industry," explained Yelland. He termed the trip "environmental education at its best, involving actual participation."

The trip was financed entirely by the students, with each paying $12 and the remaining $6 per student coming from various fund-raising activities such as bottle drives and car washes.

"I first started thinking about a trip of this nature after a current affairs class. The students had no conception of the size and different places in the province," Yelland said.

The Kamloops visit was the first of its kind for students in this area, and if Yelland's optimism catches on, there will be many more. His students also hoped that there would be other such visits.

Ranch Trip Pleases

"You learn a lot more going away, and it is more fun," said Glenn Ramsey, 14. Like many other students, Glenn found the visit to the Heffley Creek Ranch, near Kamloops, the trip highlight.

As well as seeing branding and other ranch activities, the students visited the local museum, toured the court rooms, a cement plant, an oil refinery, and the B.C. wildlife park.

The students who made the trip will reverse their guest roles of last week and play host to the 36 visiting students from Bert Edwards elementary school at Kamloops, who will arrive here next week.

With the Kamloops students they will visit the Esquimalt Naval Base, make an intertidal study at Cherry Point, visit the Provincial Museum and legislative buildings, the provincial forest museum at Duncan and watch logging operations at Shawnigan Lake and Cowichan Bay.

Port Alberni Mill Rate Jumps

PORT ALBERNI — Port Alberni city council Monday night gave first reading to its 1971 budget of $8,912,223 up $1,357,720 from last year.

It will involve a mill rate of 71.68 up 3.93 mills from last year.

Mayor Fred Bishop refuted statements by Ald. Howard McLean, chairman of the finance committee, that insufficient time had been spent on the budget, a feeling that was apparently shared by Ald. George Dunbar and George McKnight. Both said that extra time should have been spent on the budget, which they said they saw in its entirety for the first time a week ago.

The mayor said that the effect of the budget on the average residential taxpayer will be about a $7.69 increase over last year. Bishop said that two Island cities, which held the line in 1970, showed drastic mill rate increases in 1971.

One of the major increases in the mill rate provides $128,000 for a sanitary garbage disposal site. This new site will cost $66,000 more than the controversial Shoemaker Bay site, which the city was forced to abandon because of public pressure. When the extra operating costs are added this one item alone will cost about two mills extra this year, the mayor predicted.

Also included are increased wages including fringe benefits of 9¾ per cent for city employees, increased RCMP service, further welfare increases, employment of a deputy building inspector and a planning administrator, an extension of Argyle Street for second access to E. J. Dunn's school and new subdivisions, and extra funds for better preventive maintenance.

The recreation commission called for only a 3.7 per cent increase over its 1970 budget, however it was asked to trim this by a further $35,000.

Ferry Patron Still Missing

NANAIMO — RCMP here are still searching for Richard Whitney of Vancouver, reported missing Saturday when he failed to meet a friend in Nanaimo after the CP ferry docked about 2 p.m. Police said Whitney's personal effects were found in a ferry stateroom.

School Break Brings $250

CAMPBELL RIVER — About $250 was taken Saturday night when the Campbell River high school was broken into, RCMP said Monday night. The money was taken from vending machines in the school cafeteria.

Bail Set At $1,500

DUNCAN — Gannang Thom, 20, of Duncan, pleaded not guilty to a charge of wounding with intent to cause bodily harm and elected to be tried by a judge and jury. He appeared before provincial Judge Lance Heard who released him on $1,500 bail Monday afternoon.

The charge arose from an incident at a down town store at Duncan, Wednesday, in which Debra Ann Painter, 18, of Duncan was injured. Miss Painter suffered head cuts and other lacerations and had to spend several days in the Cowichan District Hospital.

Midnight Mission Saves Youths

CHEMAINUS — Chemainus volunteer fireman, neighbors and RCMP pooled efforts late Saturday and early Sunday to rescue two young boys who had fallen down a 150-foot embankment at the Chemainus River.

The boys, Larry Green, 12, of Henry Road, Chemainus, and Dale Herbertson, 14, from Victoria, escaped serious injury and were able to return to the residence of Larry's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Green, after being checked by a doctor at the scene.

Dale suffered some abrasions. He was staying with the Greens during the weekend. RCMP at Chemainus said the two boys were exploring the area west of Henry Road when they suddenly plunged down the embankment to the river bank.

The rescue mission lasted from midnight Saturday until about 2:30 a.m. Sunday.

Mrs. Green said: "We did not know anything about the river and the bank. The neighbors were extremely helpful. Without their help it would have been much more difficult to do anything."

Walker Reaches Midpoint Without Blisters

WILLOW POINT — Centennial walker Bill Hembroff reached the 170 mile point in his Island-long trek when he rested at Willow Point Monday night and so far he hasn't got a single blister.

Hembroff, 48, stopped the night at the point, which is about 20 miles north of Courtenay.

"I've had no problems so far, not even a blister," he said Monday night as he looked north toward Cape Scott — his destination, 400 miles from Victoria.

But now the walk gets more serious. Hembroff expects to be almost alone after he treks through Courtenay and tackles the tougher, more rugged country ahead.

The walk is an effort to raise $10,000 for a centennial museum for Courtenay, and Hembroff hopes to reach the cape by May 25, after averaging 20 miles a day.

Hembroff, who lives in Courtenay, has been staying with friends and relatives overnight.

He is carrying a scroll which is being signed by mayors and chairmen of centennial committees as he makes his way up the Island.

Motorists with friendly "beeps" make each day brighter for the walker. He said he makes about eight stops a day "just talking to interested people."

"As far as human nature is concerned, this has to be the best way to find out about it," he said.

Two Escape Car Fire

SHAWNIGAN LAKE — Two Nanaimo people escaped injury when their car caught fire Sunday night on the Trans-Canada Highway near Dougan Lake.

Shawnigan RCMP reported that George William Bickerton was driving north on the highway when he noticed smoke coming from his 1959 Volvo.

The smoke, according to RCMP, occurred after the car's muffler fell off. Cowichan Bay fire department attended the fire, which totally destroyed the vehicle.

Bickerton's passenger, Pauline Gee, also of Nanaimo, was unhurt.

Last-Minute Preparations

Students of Cowichan high school are putting finishing touches for a special Creativity Night Wednesday when public will be able to see exhibits and demonstrations put on by students. Highlights will include work of school's educational television department and industrial section. Here, students view some of art displays.

Tug Freed By Another At Alert Bay

ALERT BAY — A 96-foot tug which ran aground Monday morning on Haddington Reefs near Alert Bay was pulled free by another vessel, Pacific Rescue Centre in Victoria reported.

The privately owned tug, the Maple Ridge, ran aground near Haddington Island in Broughton Strait off the northeast coast of the island.

About four hours later, the tug Prestige II pulled it off the reef and took Maple Ridge in tow to Alert Bay. Initial investigation found little damage.

Decision Making by Youth

NANAIMO — More parental education, threatment centres, allowing young people to have a part in the decision-making process and keeping lines of communication open were among recommendations made at a one-day seminar on drug abuse in Nanaimo last weekend.

Co-ordinated by the local Council of Women, with speakers from the Narcotic Addiction Foundation of B.C., the seminar drew delegates from 37 organizations in Nanaimo, Ladysmith, Qualicum and Port Alberni.

John Russell, director of the foundation's research and education department, suggested the community might consider some form of treatment centre for heroin addicts in view of the large number, 80, estimated to be in the area.

Dr. Al Connolly, a foundation medical advisor, said some communities were learning to live with the problem of non-medical use of drugs without finding any solution.

It was a consequence of the problem losing its drama and inability of communities to keep up a crisis reaction together with the fact that there were no short term answers, he said.

A long term stabilization was needed.

He said some good came out of initial panic reactions to drug abuse, such as the agencies concerned coming together and starting programs as continuing information exchange.

Often, drop-in centres, or youth hostels, were started and other community programs started.

He described the operation of a foundation-sponsored program aimed at prevention and counselling, especially for families.

"We are able to neutralize a little of the parent's initial panic" and help families become a working unit once more, Connolly said.

He urged that whatever responses to the problem were, they should be rational and on a long term basis.

Easy availability of drugs was a reality and unlikely to change, he said.

"It's pretty tough to discourage drug abuse in a society that so widely encourages drug use," Connolly said.

He mentioned programs being discussed which would sanction indiscriminate prescription of drugs.

The Council of Women is planning a further meeting May 27.

Gold River Hosts

Students Swap Schools

GOLD RIVER Students—from Victoria West elementary school visited Gold River on an exchange program last week. Seven girls and four boys from the school's Grade 6 stayed at the homes of Grade 6 pupils in Gold River elementary school. The latter visited Victoria in the first part of the exchange program before Easter.

The exchange was arranged by Mrs. Sue Diakiw, librarian at Victoria West who was formerly librarian at Gold River, and Arnold Bate present librarian at Gold River school.

Bate said: "This is the first time this school has been involved in an exchange and I would say that generally the reaction was good."

On each day of the school week, special outings were arranged for the visitors and their hosts. Included were visits to Peppercorn Park, and Antler Lake and a swim in the Gold River Chalet's outdoor pool.

Highlight of the week, according to most of the visitors was a trip to Friendly Cove on Nootka Island on the Mv Uchuk.

During their 1½-hour stay at Friendly Cove, the students visited a cairn commemorating the landing of Captain Cook, looked at a historic church, explored an Indian burial cave and gathered shells and rocks from the beach on the open Pacific Ocean.

During their leisure time, the visitors participated in other activities such as fishing and hiking, pyjama or slumber parties for the girls, backyard hockey for the boys.

When a host had a regular chore which could not be neglected, his visitor usually helped — such as Marty Orton assisting George Van Leeuwan with his daily paper route.

Businessman To Lead United Appeal

DUNCAN — Phil LeMare, well known local businessman and past president of several service clubs, has accepted the campaign chairman's duties for this year's Cowichan United Appeal.

Dennis Corfield, appeal president, made the announcement at a meeting last week of the 20-member board of directors. A budget committee report was presented by Bob Howard on behalf of other members J. M. Wilson and Alan Grant, who also served on this committee in 1970.

Miss Iva Woodward, of the social rehabilitation department is newly appointed fourth member of the budget committee. Members have been working for the last six weeks, scrutinizing the budgets of participating agencies and new applications for memberships including the B.C. Borstal Association and B.C. Epilepsy Society. Mrs. Doreen McIntyre has been retained by the board as executive secretary, working part time for a portion of the year, and full time during the busy months just before and after the campaign.

Cowichan United Appeal office will again be located in the Margaret Moss health centre, Canada Avenue. The office will be open during regular business hours beginning in June.

The campaign chairman and board plan a much earlier start on the payroll deduction plan, scheduled as part of the campaign. Businesses and industry will be contacted as early as July to help lay the groundwork for wider acceptance of this concept, than was possible in the intitial fund drive last year.

Duncan Kinsmen Club members have again agreed to arrange details of the residential campaign they successfully carried out with limited time in 1970. New area maps that will include all streets within the campaign area will be available prior to the campaign. Almost 350 canvassers will be asked to assist in the community service, resulting in "one only campaign" each year for all participating agencies, instead of more than 11 separate fund drives or tag days during the year.

This year, in accordance with a regulation established by Duncan city council, no money campaigns will be permitted in Duncan, during a 90-day period, 30 days before and 30 days after the United Appeal fund drive in October.

Teacher's Hearing Postponed

DUNCAN — A provincial court hearing for Louis Trappler, a teacher at Mount Prevost Secondary School has been postponed until May 17.

Reason for the postponement, according to RCMP officials, is to await results of an investigation being carried out by the education department.

Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Cook of Westholme, parents of Joseph Cook, 13, a student at Mount Prevost, have charged Trappler with assault, following an incident at the school Jan. 26.

Trappler has since been removed from his teaching duties.

Disposal Plan On Television

Persons who are wondering what is actually involved in separating their garbage for recycling purposes will be able to see the Gonzales Bay Recycling Group in action on CBC television.

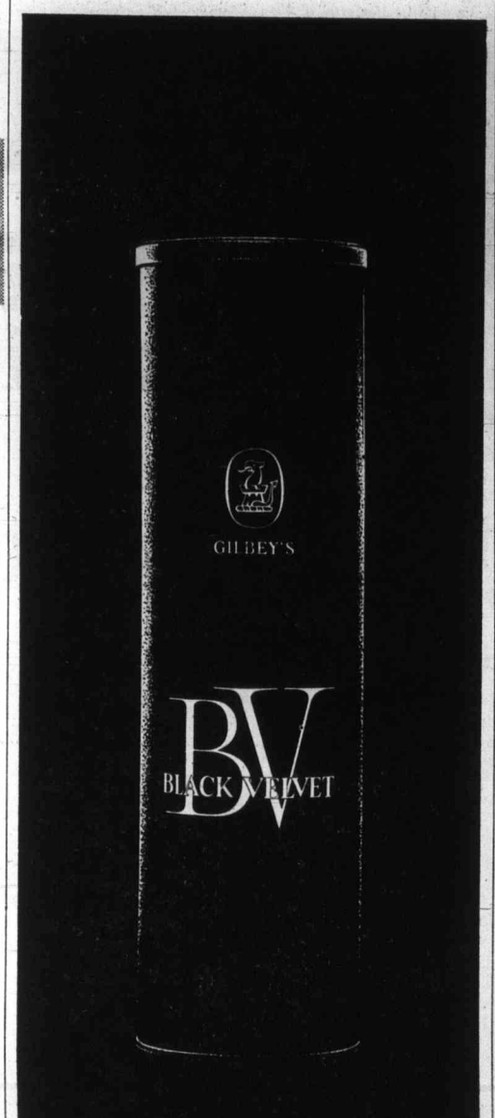

The group was filmed Friday and Saturday as they sorted garbage and neighbors brought separated items in to them. The film will be shown either on the 11 p.m. news tonight or on the Hourglass show at 6:30 p.m. Monday on Channel 2.

Maritime Museum Decision

Future Not Clear

A suggestion by Victoria aldermen last week that financial difficulties of the Maritime Museum could be solved by turning it over to the provincial government isn't as clear-cut as it might appear, the chairman of the museum's board of trustees said Saturday.

"The contents of this museum are the property of the society and it must be the society that decides what will be done with them," board chairman A. G. Coning said in an interview.

The museum's contents, he added, have been estimated to be worth close to $150,000.

The society is made up of persons who buy memberships in the museum each year. For payment of $3 for an individual membership, or $5 for a family, these persons, currently numbering about 300, are given a chance to help elect or to be among those who set museum policy.

The museum, which has had financing problems for many years, has been refused a grant by the Greater Victoria Intermunicipal Committee and Coning said the result could mean a deficit of close to $9,000 this year.

The building housing the collection on Bastion Square, is owned by the city of Victoria and leased to the society for $1 per year and upkeep, Coning said. It has also been declared an historical building so that it is tax-free.

Aside from that consideration, however, Oak Bay is the only other municipality that has decided to give financial support to the museum.

Coning believes that the museum represents all Greater Victoria municipalities and is therefore entitled to funding from them.

He said the board of trustees has been making attempts to increase the number of visitors and society members.

The museum was originally started in 1933 by a group of officers of the Royal Canadian Navy who wanted to preserve things associated with the marine history of the area, Coning said.

The society was formed to assume responsibility for the collection after its administration became too great for the officers.

Victoria's finance committee Thursday agreed to send a delegation to discuss with the provincial government housing the exhibits of the Maritime Museum in the Provincial Museum.

The committee made the decision after the Maritime Museum board had asked for a $7,000 grant from the city stating it could not put the museum on a break-even basis in the immediate future.

Visiting Other Parts of Canada

Voyageurs Join 609 Others

A group of 21 Greater Victoria high school students will be among 630 from across B.C. visiting other parts of Canada under the federal-provincial Young Voyageurs travel program this summer.

A spokesman for the Greater Victoria school board said Saturday that 17 students from high schools in the Greater Victoria school district and four from Claremont high school in the Saanich school district will travel to Orillia, Ont., in July.

Later in the summer, 21 students from Orillia will return to Victoria for a week's stay.

The Victoria group will be chosen from Grade 11 students at Oak Bay, Esquimalt, Victoria, Mount Douglas and Mount View high schools, the spokesman said.

Ken Bloomfield, professional relations officer for the Greater Victoria school board, in charge of organizing the program for the district, said school principals will recommend students for the program.

Each of the high schools has been assigned a number of students to be chosen on the basis of its total Grade 11 population, he said. Some of the schools will send only two students, some as many as four.

The schools then advertise the program among the students and receive applications from those who wish to take part, Bloomfield said.

These applications are reviewed either by the principal or by a committee of teachers, he said, to pick the students the school feels would gain the most from the program.

Although students chosen are usually "well up on their studies," marks are not the only criterion by which students are picked, he said. "A broad spectrum of factors" is considered, he added, and the students must have contributed to the school in extra-curricular activities.

He mentioned that often not enough boys apply to fill the positions available — groups are half-boys and half-girls — because boys usually feel they must work in the summer.

However, always many more girls apply than can actually be chosen, he said.

The purpose of the program is to give young Canadians a chance to get to know citizens in other parts of the country and to introduce them to the geography of Canada and the industry, politics, education and culture of a different province.

The province will select students and adult escorts to accompany them in their travels and will arrange accommodation, programs and hospitality for groups visiting B.C.

The federal government plans and pays for the groups' travel and gives the province financial assistance toward their expenses.

This year B.C. will receive $110,000 of the total federal contribution of $750,000 to cover 30 groups. This is 11 more groups than the province would normally be allotted, because of the B.C. centenary.

Thieves Nab Quantity Of Drugs

Thieves who broke into a Victoria drug company dispensary overnight Saturday found a secret drawer and stole a large amount of drugs, Victoria police disclosed Monday.

A police report said the McGill and Orme dispensary at 1105 Pandora was entered and the thieves found a locked inner drawer hidden inside a large drawer. Taken from the secret compartment were at least 100 tablets of Methadone, 600 tablets of Demerel and other items, including morphine and codeine.

In addition, $10 to $15 cash was stolen.

At Les Blow's Motorcycle Sales, 2940 Douglas, overnight Saturday thieves not only took a $799 Kawasaki motorcycle but also stole some accessories — licence plates, a black leather jacket and a blue helmet.

Incorrect Address

The address of 1615 Richardson was used in error Saturday in a story in The Daily Colonist about a Victoria woman charged with mischief.

Correct address of the woman, Mrs. Lillian Agnes Scott, 53, was given by police as 1655 Richardson. The error was made by the reporter who wrote the story.

Cumberland Mayor Takes Back Seat in Courtenay

Bypassed Town Claps Politely

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Staff Reporter

COURTENAY — She was 82 years old and the cancellation of the queen's visit to Cumberland, "was the dirtiest trick" that's ever been played on her.

"It's a downright shame," Mrs. Ellen Miller complained.

"I came to Cumberland 59 years ago, and at that time there wasn't even any Courtenay, but Cumberland was a bustling place, a roaring town," she said, looking out at the 500 or so Cumberland folk who had come to Courtenay's Woodcote Park Monday to catch a glimpse of the queen, Prince Philip and Princess Anne.

And a fleeting glimpse it was. It took the royal party exactly 45 seconds to drive past the Cumberland contingent. Sitting in an open car, the queen seemed unaware of the controversy that had been caused by the cancellation of her visit to Cumberland, about five miles west of Courtenay.

Cumberland Mayor Bill Moncrief said that he had been invited to meet the royal family at Comox, but that he did not go.

Asked why, he said he didn't "want to go into all that again."

He said he was "tired of all this nonsense. I had my reasons and they were good ones, and they have been plastered all over the papers. I don't want to say anything more that may spoil the queen's visit."

The park, which had been given to Cumberland residents as an assembly place for the big day, was virtually empty an hour before the queen's arrival.

There were a few Canadian Legion members, a few senior citizens, several dozen school children and the Mayor.

"I have the greatest admiration for the queen," said Moncrief before the royal party arrived.

"But I'm not going to be standing in the front line to welcome her. It still makes me mad to think that first she was all set to drive through Cumberland and then all of a sudden, the trip is called off."

The people of Cumberland, be said, were still all very upset about the decision to take the town out of the queen's itinerary because of what tour officials said was lack of time.

"Don't make me laugh. A very casual tour it was going to be. I wonder what's so casual about shaking the hands of all these tin gods the queen has to meet every day?" Moncrief said.

The mayor's mood was reflected in the Cumberland crowd's general attitude. They were going to greet the queen politely, maybe gladly, but not over-enthusiastically.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Miller continued telling people around her what she thought of the whole thing.

BRUSSELS (AP) — France, which twice has blackballed British bids to join the European Economic Community, made at least one clear concession Monday in its new proposals on bringing Britain into the common market.

The French dropped a demand for a promise of drastic cuts in British sugar imports from Commonwealth countries, especially Jamaica, Guyana and Mauritius.

This was certain to disappoint French sugar beet growers, long a powerful group. But it won the general approval of other common market members and an expression of optimism from Geoffrey Rippon, the chief British negotiator.

The British negotiator told reporters at Brussels Airport the French offer was a sign that a way through the bargaining difficulties would begin to appear in the next few days.

Another new French proposal was disclosed. It dealt with the sum Britain should contribute to the EEC budget in its first years of membership.

Other market countries appear to favor the proposal. It lays down a formula including collections from British duties on farm and industrial products, and a sum calculated from the size of Britian's gross national product. There also would be a rebate, which is what the other members and Britian want most to know about.

On other issues there was less progress.

The French put forward a proposal on the future of the pound sterling, a subject the British have been trying to avoid.

The French want a promise that every year for 20 years the British would pay back five per cent of its debts, called sterling balances, a total of $10,320 million, owed to dozens of countries. Other member countries would be satisfied with a statement by the British that they want to reduce the sum.

Floating Mark Rides Out Dollar Storm

BONN (UPI)—Emergency currency action by west European nations appeared Monday to have eased the international monetary crisis. The U.S. dollar steadied during the day on some markets and the wholesale selling of dollars by speculators ended for the time being.

Devaluation in Austria dropped the dollar to its lowest point since the end of the Second World War and the "floating" of the West German mark had the effect of devaluating the dollar 3.75 per cent. But the dollar was firm in London, Paris and some other money centres.

Money speculators were reported holding back in West Germany, betting the mark would be worth more in the next few days.

In Washington, the U.S. treasury department said it felt the international financial crisis was improving and "no immediate action" was planned. International banker Ezra Zilkha in New York said the emergency period was over although the "basic questions" remain unsolved. And Nobel Prize-winning economist Paul A. Samuelson in Cambridge, Mass., said the measures would restore "equilibrium" to European markets and should not be considered "an economic Pearl Harbor."

In West Germany, the crisis centre, an expected immediate outflow of dollars failed to materialize on the first trading day since exchanges were closed Wednesday in Germany, Switzerland, Austria, the Netherlands and Belgium.

The problem began last week as traders and speculators flooded West German banks with dollars considered overvalued against the healthy and prosperous mark. By purchasing marks and holding them, the speculators could clear a profit when trading them back to receive more dollars than originally invested if the dollar slipped in value.

But throughout the capitals of Europe Monday, trading was cautious. Observers felt many speculators were hoping the mark would rise to as much as 5 per cent above the old parity of 3.66 to the dollar, or perhaps an official

White Curse, Red Heap

Chief Matthews
. . . touch of sadness

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Staff Reporter

SANDSPIT — That wasn't the red carpet Queen Elizabeth saw Monday when she looked down the stairs from the official platform at this Queen Charlotte Islands airport and logging centre.

It was a fallen Haida Indian dancer in a crimson native robe — victim of one of the curses the white world inflicted on his people a long time ago.

He was drunk.

"Someone gave him the drink today," said his mother, a member of the colorful dancing group that — despite the one unrehearsed incident — thoroughly pleased the queen, Prince Philip and their daughter, Princess Anne.

The queen, in particular, spent much time chatting with the brightly-robed Indians afterward.

The wobbly dancer, who had spun away from the rest of the group prior to the arrival of the royal visitors, had a hard time keeping his headgear from slipping down over his eyes.

Suddenly, he tumbled to the ground at one side of the stairs and lay there in a heap, the first object the queen saw when she looked down the platform. She smiled briefly.

When he tried to give a repeat performance a little later, a smiling RCMP officer took him gently to the edge of the grass clearing where the dance was taking place — the tribesman attempting to turn the officer into a dancing partner as they went.

Proud, Sad

It all seemed to fit into place with what Chief Willy Matthews had been saying a little earlier.

The 85-year-old chief of the Haida Eagle tribe is a proud man who is glad to greet his queen and who has deep respect for the flag, but he is not happy with what the white world has done to his people.

"Personally I don't believe in this junk," he said of the plastic that had been affixed to his wooden headress in place of the whale's teeth that were once used.

"I don't think it has been good for us," he said — "this civilized life your people brought. We're modern now. We smoke cigarettes and swear in English."

There was a touch of sadness in the old man's tones. He could just as easily had said white man taught the Haida to drink alcohol and that one day one of his men would fall down before the queen.

Fire Sweeps London Hotel Killing Seven, Injuring Nine

LONDON (CP) — Fire swept through a five-storey London hotel early today and firemen reported seven persons were killed.

One woman leaped from a window and was impaled on railings below, a policeman reported.

"It was terrible," he said. "She was taken away alive, I think. People were screaming and shouting from windows all over the hotel."

Firemen scrambled up ladders in search of other guests possibly trapped by heavy flames and smoke.

Scotland Yard said nine persons were injured. The Yard reported earlier that 40 persons had been taken to hospitals, but a spokesman said later that was an exaggeration caused by confusion at the scene.

The Hills is one of several hotels in the area that attracts tourists seeking comfortable accommodations at rates lower than the top London hotels.

Several hundred people, many in their night clothes, watched the drama, their faces grim. Relays of ambulances skirted the crowds taking casualties to hospital.

The hotel is undergoing extensive renovations and only about 30 persons were in the

SEOUL (AP) — A bus jammed with at least 90 persons missed a curve and plunged down a 50-foot cliff into a reservoir Monday, killing at least 76 persons.

It was South Korea's worst bus accident.

Police said 11 persons had been rescued and 76 bodies recovered after the smashed bus was brought up from the waters of Chonggyong reservoir, 20 miles east of Seoul.

B.C. Not for Sale — Bennett

Province-First Policy Set for Parley

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislature Reporter

Premier Bennett said Monday he plans to present "a British Columbia first" policy to the federal-provincial constitutional talks which are to be held here in mid-June.

The premier added he also wished to serve notice on Ottawa that "British Columbia is not for sale."

Referring to an Ottawa report, published last weekend in the Victoria Times, which indicated that the provincial government might be willing to negotiate the sale of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway to the federal government, Bennett said he wanted to remove all doubt from the minds of the public and federal authorities.

"Bennett and British Columbia will not sell the PGE. British Columbia is not for sale and the PGE is part of the great public ownership of this province," he said.

Bennett added: "British Columbia is going to be more forceful in seeing it gets a fair share in Confederation which it isn't getting now. We will be forceful — we will be good hosts, but we will present British Columbia's point of view.

"I am just advising Ottawa and the prime minister as he moves into Russia that we intend to keep control over our own development."

The premier said it would be more logical if Ottawa took up his repeated offers over the years to sell the Canadian National line from Prince George to Prince Rupert to B.C. for a nominal amount so that it could become part of the PGE.

"Ottawa never has any confidence and faith in the north," he said. "Only the PGE opened up our great northern areas for the benefit of the people of the province. Do you think that we would sell this dynamic railroad to a government 3,000 miles away that has no interest in the north?

"Of course not."

Etna Grows Dangerous

CATANIA, Sicily (AP) — Mount Etna's worst eruption in two decades became dangerous Monday as lava spouted from new vents almost half way down the mountain and streamed toward the towns of Milo and Fornazzo.

The new outbreak Sunday night was at the 5,905-foot level of the 10,826-foot volcano. By dawn the streams of molten rock had reached the 3,608-foot level.

But Amount Unknown

Victoria Sharing Renewal Funds

Victoria will definitely get some of the $3.5 million federal urban renewal money allocated to B.C., Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock was told Monday.

Haddock told the Colonist he got the message in a phone call from Public Works Minister William Chant following a Monday meeting of the provincial cabinet.

"We won't know how much," said Haddock, "until Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell makes a formal announcement, but he's out of town." Campbell is in his home riding of Comox for the royal tour.

"I don't like to jump the gun," said Haddock, "until we know just what this will amount to in dollars but our priorities are clear. We must move to buy the Ocean Cement property on Wharf Street and move fast on waterfront development."

The mayor explained, "All the funds were to have gone to Vancouver but I think we were able to convince the provincial government that we had a very viable and active proposal.

"Right now I'm on edge hoping the federal government has allocated more than the original $3.5 million. We could use $2.5 million for our plans," said Haddock.

Campbell met in March with a number of civic officials and local businessmen to discuss plans for the Inner Harbor and to coordinate their efforts.

Following that meeting Campbell said he would have "a pretty fair indication by the first of May" if anything could be done to provide funds for Inner Harbor renewal.

Vancouver had made a strong bid for urban renewal funds to build a community recreation complex and to renovate 1,000 old houses. Campbell indicated in March that unless Vancouver had its plans complete by April 30, then funds allocated for Vancouver would be used in Victoria.

Vancouver did complete its plans but indications Monday were that there would still be funds for use in Victoria.

An influx of urban renewal funds could trigger major developments by private investors around the Inner Harbor that would complement civic activity.

Marathon Realty, a division of Canadian Pacific Investments, has said the company is ready to proceed with $1 million in redeveloping its waterfront property on Belleville Street.

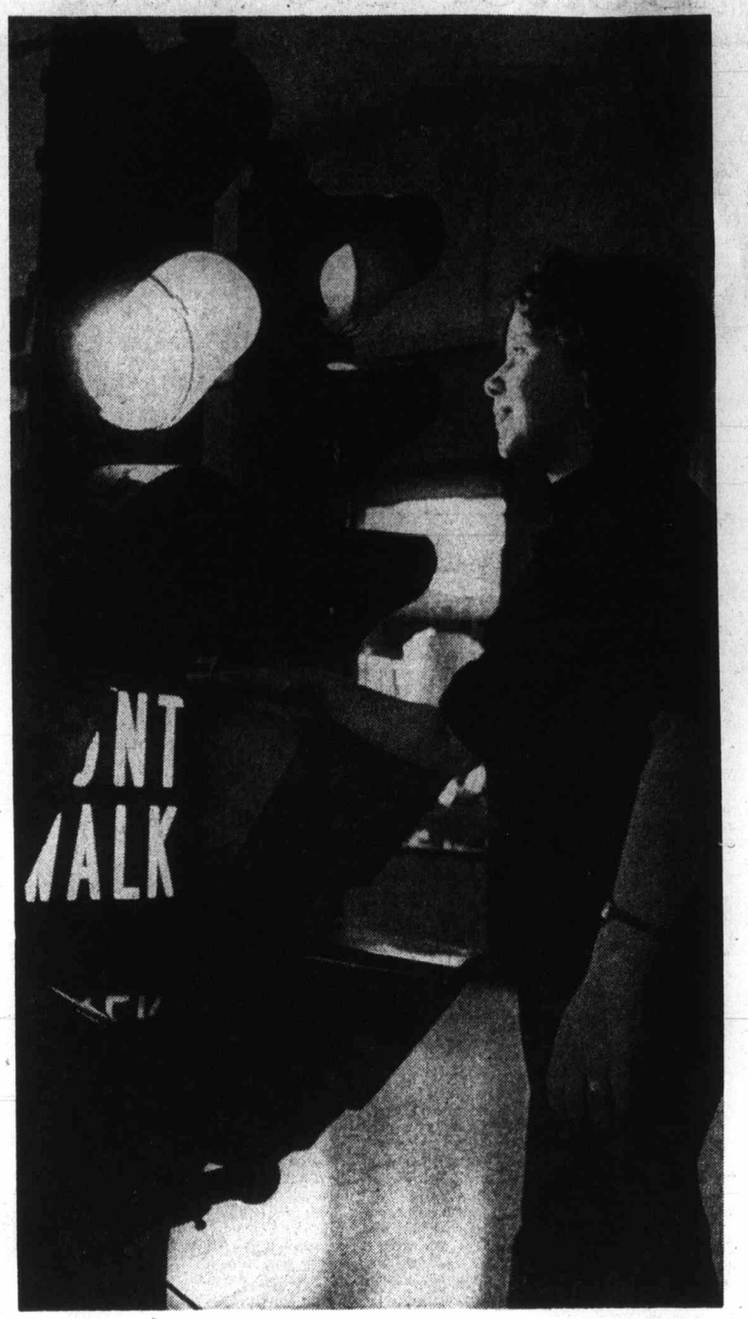

Two developers, the Reid and Nordal groups, have also indicated strong interest in building in the area.

Reports prepared on the feasibility of Inner Harbor development for the city suggest that civic initiative in development of the area would generate about $27 million in private investment.

"It just remains to be seen," said Haddock, "how much we can get, for only then will we be able to determine just how far we can go."

Saanich Police Hailed by Curtis

It's a very unusual week, Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis said Monday, when he doesn't receive at least one compliment about the municipal police department — and it's also "a very rare occasion" when he hears criticism of a department member.

That point was one of several made by Curtis, also chairman of the Saanich police commission, as he opened the department's big Canadian Police Week display in Hillside shopping centre. He also said:

- It is "a sad fact of life today" that years of dedicated and imaginative community relations work by local police departments "can be obliterated in a matter of hours" by incidents involving police elsewhere in North America.

And so, he added, "it is more important than ever before that police departments and their individual members make every possible effort to engage in direct communications with the people they live among and serve."

- He described the Saanich force as enjoying the reputation of being "one of the finest" of its kind in Canada and said this part of Canada and North America is "extremely fortunate" in the kind of man who becomes a policeman.
- He related the "startling" growth of the Saanich force from 1906 until now which had "merely kept pace with the increased population . . . and there is no doubt that our chief constable could use additional manpower under certain circumstances."

The police display will continue from 9:30 a.m. each day through this week, closing at 5:30 p.m. today, 5 p.m. Saturday and 9 p.m. other days. In addition, there will be public tours Saturday and Sunday of the public safety building at 760 Vernon.

Committee Study

Only Voters Approve Ice Surface

Recommendation Monday of an ice surface as the indoor recreational facility for Saanich's Cedar Hill area did not sit too well with two non-voting members of a committee set up to study the matter.

Voting members of the committee — Ald. Leslie Passmore, Ald. William Campbell and chairman Ald. Alan Newberry — all voted for the recommendation which now goes to council.

Ald. William Noel, who had to leave Monday's meeting early, said he was in favor of an ice surface.

The committee also recommended that the firm of Peterson & Lester be appointed architects for the new facility.

Mrs. Louise Mason, 3409 Browning, said she would prefer a community centre to an ice surface. She said she would be in favor of it being built in the southern end of Cedar Hill Park.

N. R. Zapf, 3833 Cumberland, said he did not see any point in coming to the meeting if members were not given an opportunity to study the suggestions put forward by various groups.

He wasn't necessarily against an ice surface, he said, but would have liked time to consider the submissions. "But we have no vote anyway," he added.

The two other non-voting members of the committee — Lyn Crawford, 1651 McKenzie, and G. H. Emery, 1250 Judge Place — did not attend the meeting. Chairman Newberry said they had been invited.

Mayor Hugh Curtis, who attended the meeting although he is not a member of the study committee, said he favored a community centre.

Submissions were read to the meeting from Saanich Minor Hockey Association, Greater Victoria Lawn Bowling Association, Victoria and District Amateur Basketball Association.

An imaginative suggestion for a community centre, complete with floor plan and artist's conception of the building, was received from Joseph Barber-Starkey, 1232 Judge Place.

Zapf brought to the meeting with him a proposal from Reynolds junior high school for a visual and performing arts centre attached to the school.

Saanich recreation manager William Young told the meeting there was "a real demand in the municipality for a large floor area for cultural and social events."

The committee was set up in February to recommend what type of building will be erected in the Cedar Hill area and what it will be used for.

The building, to be completed before the end of next year under a budget of $260,000, will be the fourth and last provided for by the 1967 indoor recreation bylaw.

But Sewer Issue Deferred

Broadmead Rated As Development

At a special meeting Monday night, Saanich council voted to declare Broadmead a development area as outlined in a master land-use plan submitted to council and subject to recent amendments to the B.C. Municipal Act.

But a request from the development company for council to extend a sewer system to service Broadmead, the old Rithet farm at Royal Oak, was referred to the public works committee.

A report from Municipal Engineer Neville Life indicated that extending the sewers would require the finding of $1.3 million for construction and acceptance by property owners of an increase of about $7 in parcel tax. He stressed that those costs were based on general figures on possible subdivisions and didn't include regional trunk or maintenance costs.

Fred Russell, a director of the development company, referred to two closed meetings which council had already held to discuss the possible extension of the sewered area and said his company was anxious to know as soon as possible what was involved in getting sewers.

He told council that houses already built had sewer connections but also had to put in septic tanks.

"We're finding ourselves strait-jacketed," he said. "Because of the state of percolation, we have to make larger lots and this requires more expensive houses."

The company started seven years ago on the development, Russell said, "and we've got to get some answers. It's the moment of truth as far as we're concerned."

The master plan submitted to council covers about 700 acres and calls for single-family dwellings, multiple housing, parks, schools, community and commercial development.

The plan brochure points out that the variety of housing will permit the natural combining of population of all ages. The Hudson's Bay Company, it says, has purchased a majority interest in the 33.25 acres reserved for commercial development and Broadmead plans the first phase of the shopping area to be started in 1973.

Independents

Members Soar Past 200

Membership in the Victoria branch of the Committee for an Independent Canada has increased from 25 to more than 200 in less than a month, a spokesman for the group said Monday.

Norm Ruff said that a second meeting of the group, held Monday night at the student union building of the University of Victoria, attracted more than 100 people, more than three times the number attracted by the first meeting held last month.

From this, he said, a committee of 30 people was elected to organize work groups to start such projects as panel discussions, educational talks and petition-signing for an independent Canada.

Ruff said the petition-signing was the most important project because it was part of a nation-wide effort. The national organization hoped to present Prime Minister Trudeau with signatures early next month, Ruff said, and it was hoped to obtain 10,000 signatures from the Victoria area.

Decision Next Monday

School Board May Halt Teacher Dues Checkoff

It's time the Greater Victoria school board stopped collecting dues for the B.C. Teacher's Federation, according to school trustee Peter Bunn.

His motion Monday night to the education committee of the board that the district discontinue automatic checkoff of federation dues will come before the board for a decision next Monday.

"I feel we should re-assess this BCTF situation in the light of the teacher's strike earlier this year, which I personally found a rather irresponsible action," said Bunn.

"I feel that the federation should go it alone now.

"If teachers believe in the association then each member should be responsible for supporting it with direct payments rather than the school board making automatic deductions."

Trustee Victor Rogers pointed out that if the board continues to make deductions, then it would be in a position to know which teachers belong to the federation, and which don't.

"I don't believe this is any of our business," said Rogers.

The provincial government enacted legislation during the session under which membership in the federation ceased to be a condition of employment for teachers, thus ending a "closed-shop" situation for the federation, and making membership of teachers voluntary.

Board chairman Allan McKinnon, himself a teacher, said he felt a change in present policy could be interpreted by teachers as being an antagonistic move on the part of the board.

He said the federation did a tremendous amount of professional up-grading work among teachers with in-service training programs.

But, he said, if all school districts followed a Victoria move, then the federation could end up with just hard-core militant unionist membership, without the professional training aspects.

"It would just be spiteful to stop co-operating," he said.

Trustees Carron Jameson, Philip Ney and Walter Donald agreed with ending the checkoffs, and Harold Knight wanted the checkoffs to remain.

Final decision will come next Monday.

Curtain Held For Drive-By

The Victoria Theatre Guild's production of Cactus Flower, originally scheduled to begin at 8:15 p.m. tonight at Langham Court Theatre has been postponed until 8:30 p.m.

A Guild spokesman said the move was being taken to facilitate traffic on Rockland Avenue as the queen will be passing through the area on the way to Government House at 8 p.m.

Bennetts Join Royal Cruise

A surprise trip aboard the royal yacht Britannia was made by Premier Bennett and Mrs. Bennett overnight Monday.

The premier's office said Monday the Bennetts joined the royal family aboard the Britannia at Comox Monday night for a cruise through the Gulf Islands early today before arriving in Victoria shortly after 3 p.m.

Trustees Wrestle 'Yeah'-to-'Ney' List of Objectives

First there was the "yeah" list—and it looked as if Greater Victoria school board trustees were actually going to agree on a list of objectives.

But then came the "Ney" list, and though it had been cut to three, it was enough to cause tabling of the issue for an undefined length of time.

Trustees have been haggling over the proposed board objectives since the first meeting of the year, and had finally referred some 50 suggestions to a small committee to whittle down.

Monday night at the education committee, a short list of 11 objectives was presented for trustee approval and discussion — and additions.

The list included:

- Exploring methods of lowering the pupil-adult ratio in schools.
- Broadening the school athletic program.
- Striving for earlier recognition of learning difficulties.
- Providing opportunities for all students, regardless of age, to obtain 12 years of education without fees.

Turstee Philip Ney objected to the method by which the original trustee suggestions had been whittled down to those which could be started this year.

He was particularly insistent about the need to introduce a foreign language in kindergarten — not, he said, to teach it, but to expose children to another language.

Trustee Victor Rogers objected, saying the subject had been discussed in committee and turned down.

But trustee Daphne Temple came to Ney's rescue, saying this had also been one of her suggestions.

Ney also wanted to see implementation of removal of grade distinctions after Grade 7.

"You might say there's the yeah list and the Ney list," interjected trustee Peter Bunn.

Building Site Hit by Fire

Fire Monday night destroyed one workshed, damaged another shed, a trailer and a pickup truck on the construction site for the new Victoria Press building in the 2600 block Douglas. Victoria fire department officials said the cause of the fire is still under investigation and the amount of damage had not been estimated.
